

Nixon Aware Of Whitelash Deterioration

By B. J. RICHEY
(c) Newhouse News Service
Columbia, S.C. — A moderate political climate, brought on by the growing black vote, is emerging in the South.
As a result, the white southerner's resistance to the national mandate of school desegregation is dying.
Democrats have been aware of this changing scene for some time. After trying out the so-called Southern Strategy which excluded blacks from political participation, the Nixon administration also appears headed for a new strategy that will actively woo black voters in the South.
In no other southern state are these facts more evident than here in South Carolina. Consider these events:
Shortly after civil rights leader Whitney Young died, the three black members of the South Carolina legislature — all Democrats — introduced a resolution eulogizing Young. It was approved unanimously.
A white legislator recently introduced a bill that would require welfare mothers to be sterilized. Blacks and whites read it as racist and practically ignored it.

Just this month, a young black man, James Clyburn, a member of the governor's staff, was elected president of the South Carolina Young Democrats.

Thurmond Aide

Sen. Strom Thurmond, a Republican, has hired Thomas Moss, a Negro, to work on his staff. One recommendation expected to be forthcoming from Moss and Thurmond is for the White House to appoint some blacks as deputy U.S. marshals.

"There's no question that there's been some change going on," says South Carolina native Harry Dent, a presidential adviser and political troubleshooter. "I don't have to read the polls to know that."

Dent said the change taking place in South Carolina is also occurring in varying degrees in all southern states. As a result, he said the GOP must develop "a new image."

"We've got to change our direction," Dent said. "I have been talking to our southern chairmen and they agree."

They agree everywhere except in South Carolina, that is, where Republicans have split over the black participation proposal.

The right wing of the Republican party is in control and chairman Kenneth Powell, a Columbia attorney, is dead set against allowing blacks an active party role.

No Reciprocity?

"There's a moderate wing of the party which wants to invite blacks in," Powell said. "Then there's a wing which doesn't believe blacks are sincere. They think blacks want something for nothing."

Powell said instead the South Carolina GOP would broaden its "strategic base, but not its philosophical base," which is a way of saying he wants blacks to vote for Republican candidates, but without being promised that the government will respond to their needs.

Powell said, however, that he thought all South Carolina candidates would stay away from the anti-black platform in the future.

In contrast to South Carolina, Dent said two blacks had been appointed to the Alabama Republican executive committee.

Politicians underscore the point that this growing political moderation shouldn't be interpreted as meaning Southerners are adopting liberal ideological positions.

Indeed, the change has come simply because most Southerners have concluded that desegregation of schools — the primary southern political issue — is here to stay.

Earlier this year, four newly-elected governors — all Democrats and including South Carolina's Gov. John West — denounced segregation as a political tactic.

Mother in Detroit Throws Baby Under Moving Car's Wheels

Detroit (AP) — An 11-month-old boy died after his mother threw him in front of a moving car Saturday, police said.

The mother and father are in police custody for investigation of murder in the case.

A homicide officer said the parents were involved in an argument when the mother carried the child outside and threw him into the street.

The father took the child to a hospital but doctors said he was dead on arrival.

Supreme Court Turns Down Publishers' Appeal Challenge to Postage Hike Fails

Washington (UPI) — Substantial postal rate increases went into effect today, including a boost in the first-class postage stamp from 6 to 8 cents, after newspaper and magazine publishers failed to win a delay from the Supreme Court.

In a brief comment issued late Saturday, Chief Justice Warren E. Burger said simply: "The application for emergency relief is denied."

Attorneys for the publishers earlier had lost challenges in U.S. District Court and before a three-judge panel of the U.S. Court of Appeals, which upheld a ruling that the publishers had failed to show that the temporary rate increases were illegal.

The publishers contended the increases would cost their industry

$850,000 a week and that the general public would be paying $23 million more a week.

Under the new rates worked out by the revamped U.S. Postal Service, first-class stamps will go from 6 cents to 8; airmail from 10 to 11c; regular post cards from 5 cents to 6, and air mail post cards from 8 to 9.

Second-class mail — most heavily used by the newspaper and magazine publishers — will cost 20 to 30% more the first year, and third-class rates will go up by about one-third. Parcel post, the bulk of fourth-class mail, will remain unchanged because rates were raised just last November.

The postal service is proposing at least one rate reduction, however — from 25 cents a half ounce to 21 cents for air mail to Asia, Australia and South Africa, effective July 1. Air mail rates to Central and South America would go up 2 cents a half-ounce, and to Europe and North Africa, one cent a half-ounce.

Under the congressional act designed to take the mail service out of politics and make it self-sustaining, rate increases are subject to approval by the new five-member postal rate commission. But the law allows the postal service to put temporary rates into effect 100 days after its original request if the commission has not acted.

The rate commission will not begin hearings on the increases until Monday, and these could drag out for weeks.

The temporary rate hikes were expected to produce an additional $145 billion a year in revenue. The postal budget for the current fiscal year is $9.7 billion, and a $1.2 billion deficit is anticipated.

In its Postal Reorganization Act last year, Congress relinquished its responsibility for setting postal rates and set up the semi-independent U.S. Postal Service that is due to take over complete operation by July 1.

Meanwhile, Democratic National chairman Lawrence F. O'Brien accused the Nixon administration of playing politics with postal reforms he conceived four years ago while he was postmaster general.

He said there are continuing reports of high-level promotions still requiring clearance by republican officials.

Stressing he was not talking in his role as Democratic Chairman, O'Brien said "the aura of political partisanship continues to engulf the Postal Service and make it virtually indistinguishable" from its status prior to reorganization last August.

He accused Postmaster General Winton M. Blount, "a political appointee of President Nixon," of securing appointment as the new postmaster general of the revamped Postal Service and then getting himself elected chairman of the board of governors.

"In other words, Mr. Blount is reporting to himself," O'Brien said.

Egyptians Praise Sadat; Plotters' Deaths Urged

Cairo — Egyptians thronged Cairo Saturday shouting support for President Anwar Sadat and demanding death for nine officials accused of plotting against him.

Observers said the demonstrations were the largest display of public sentiment since the death of President Gamal Abdel Nasser seven months ago when millions of mourning Arabs went into the streets.

Political sources said Sadat spent the morning at home and would meet with his reorganized cabinet today.

"March on, Sadat, we are your soldiers for liberation," shouted people in the crowd.

The praise of Sadat mingled with calls for the execution of six former ministers and three top leaders of the Arab Socialist Union (ASU), Egypt's only political party. The semiofficial Cairo newspaper Al-Ahram said the men were being kept under house arrest.

Sadat said in a nationwide radio and television address Friday he asked Interior Minister Sharawi Gomaa for his resignation Thursday after discovering Gomaa was plotting against him. He said the other five ministers then resigned in an attempt to topple his government.

Gomaa, who ran Egypt's secret police, was singled out for particular fury by the crowd. Thinking he was at a police station, a cursing group surrounded it and shouted that no mercy should be shown him.

The demonstrations, which appeared to be spontaneous, snaked through the city and milled around the president's official and unofficial residences.

A Sadat loyalist, Judge Hafez Badawi, was named National Assembly speaker. Badawi is also minister in the new 33-man Cabinet sworn in after Sadat denounced the alleged plotters.

Dr. Mohammed Dakruri, a U.S.-trained political scientist, was named acting secretary-general of the Arab Socialist Union. Mohammed Maher, a court of appeals judge, became attorney general.

Sadat promised a sweeping reform of the union, with new "free elections from the bottom to the top, and I will supervise them myself."

At the seat of the trouble was Ali Sabry, the pro-Soviet vice president whom Sadat fired on May 2. A stormy debate between Sadat and Sabry, who opposed the Egypt-Libya-Syria federation took place late in April.

In his speech Friday, Sadat said Sabry insisted on taking his case to the 150-man party Central Committee, but the president found the committee had been rigged by Gomaa against him.

The interior minister had even ringed Cairo radio station with agents to stop Sadat if he tried to broadcast to the nation and "this amounted to a coup d'etat," he added.

With the apparent back of the Egyptian armed forces, Sadat then moved quickly to stifle what he considered a threat to his government.

The Egyptian press splashed Sadat's speech and voiced full support for the changes.

Mansfield Asks Nixon To Negotiate Troop Cut

Compiled From News Wires
Washington — Senate Democratic Leader Mike Mansfield Saturday urged the administration to seize upon the Russian offer to negotiate a reduction of forces in Central Europe. He said the talks could and should start next month.

At the same time, Mansfield accused the White House of "overkill" in its opposition to his proposal to cut the 300,000-troop U.S. garrison in Europe by 50% by the end of 1971.

By "overkill" Mansfield was referring to the administration's vigorous lobbying against his proposal and bringing such former top government officials as Dean Rusk, John J. McCloy, Lucius Clay, George W. Ball, Henry Cabot Lodge, Nicholas Katzenbach, Alfred M. Gruenther, Lauris Norstad and Lyman L. Lemnitzer to the White House Thursday to proclaim their opposition.

Then on Saturday, President Nixon made his first personal statement condemning proposals to cut U.S. troops in Europe in half and drew a statement of total accord from former President Lyndon Johnson.

Nixon's statement had been shown to Johnson and prompted another from the former chief executive, which was released through the Florida White House.

"I have seen the President's statement opposing at this time a unilateral reduction of military forces maintained in Europe for the common defense. I am totally in accord with that statement."

"American steadiness in support of NATO for more than 20 years has not only helped to bring security and progress to the North Atlantic community, it has also encouraged movement toward reconciliation with those toward the east. Unilateral reduction of our military forces in Europe would endanger what we have achieved in the past and shatter our hopes for the future."

Mansfield shied away from predicting he would win in Wednesday's showdown vote on his plan. A UPI poll of senators completed Saturday showed a close division, with administration supporters holding a slight edge of committed senators and with the outcome resting in the hands of less than two dozen senators who have not reached or have not announced a position.

The survey indicated that at least 37 senators were prepared to vote for the Mansfield measure, 40 members were against the plan, 18 undecided, three whose views were unknown and one absentee, Sen. Karl Mundt, R-S.D., recovering from a stroke.

The issue is so closely contested that one member, freshman Sen. Glenn Beall Jr., R-Md., who is recovering from an appendectomy, is preparing to get out of his sickbed if necessary to vote against the amendment.

Mansfield also disclosed that, despite the adamancy with which the administration opposes his legislation, no one in the administration had sought to convince him not to offer the legislation to return 150,000 troops by the end of the year.

The proposal will be voted on after 4 p.m. CDT Wednesday as an amendment to the House-passed bill extending the life of the draft for another two years. The draft law expires June 30.

Rail Strike Almost Sure

Washington (UPI) — Day-long negotiations produced no movement in contract talks between railroads and the signalmen's union Saturday, and union president C. J. Chamberlain said it appeared almost certain a nationwide strike will take place at 6 a.m. local time Monday.

Chamberlain and officials of the National Railway Labor Conference, the industry's bargaining agent, spent the day and most of the evening in separate conferences with Labor Dept. mediators.

Afterwards Chamberlain said: "There's been no progress as far as we're concerned. I am not optimistic about being able to reconcile this thing because they have refused to recognize the needs of our people."

Two key issues remaining are pay raises for the 13,000 members of the Brotherhood of Railway Signalmen and overnight housing conditions for the roughly one-fifth of them who must spend nights away from home, Chamberlain said.

U.S. Senators Paid $309,000 in Speaking Fees Last Year

Washington (AP) — Business and other special-interest groups boosted senators' pay by more than a quarter-million dollars in speaking fees last year.

The banking industry paid $15,000 to top members of the Senate Banking Committee, including the chairman, Sen. John Sparkman, D-Ala., plus both the GOP and Democratic Senate leaders.

A single group, the Associated Milk Producers, which won high government price supports for milk this spring, gave $10,000 in speaking checks. One check for $5,000, the largest listed, went to Sen. Harold Hughes, D-Iowa.

Sen. Gale McGee, D-Wyo., collected $4,000 from three labor groups whose legislative interests come before the Senate committee he heads.

The speaking fees from special-interest groups showed up in public reports required by the Senate Ethics Committee. The deadline for filing them passed Saturday.

With almost all reports in, the total outside earnings from speeches, books and similar activities reached $634,976.

Of this, a whopping $309,288 came from speech payments by special-interest groups.

Addresses at colleges accounted for most of the rest of the money.

The Associated Milk Producers, based in San Antonio, Tex., shelled out four of the five highest payments found in the Senate reports.

Besides the $5,000 for Hughes, it paid $3,000 to presidential hopeful Sen. Edmund Muskie, D-Maine, and $2,500 each to Sens. Adlai E. Stevenson III, D-Ill., and Thomas F. Eagleton, D-Mo.

The American Bankers Assn. paid $2,000 for two speeches by Sparkman and $2,050 for two more by Sen. John Tower of Texas, the ranking Republican on the Senate Banking Committee.

Sparkman listed $11,400 in speech income, with more than half of his money coming from bank groups, a credit union association and a mortgage company.

Federal law forbids political contributions by corporations, but speaking fees are permitted.

The largest outlay by a labor group was $6,000 by various arms of the Retail Clerks International. The money was split among seven senators, with Sen. Harrison Williams, D-N.J., who is now Senate Labor Committee chairman, getting the highest total at $1,500.

Other large payments by interest groups included: $3,250 to Sen. J. W. Fulbright, D-Ark., for a speech at an Indiana peace rally.

$2,500 to Sen. Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz., from the National Electric Contractors.

$2,000 each to Sen. Mike Mansfield,

D-Mont. and Sen. Edward Brooke, R-Mass., from the American Paper Institute.

$1,500 each to Sen. Hugh Scott, R-Pa., and Sen. Roman L. Hruska, R-Nebr., from the National Confectioners Assn.

Four members of the Senate equalled or topped their regular Senate salaries with outside speaking fees. Most of this money came from campus appearances.

Sen. Birch Bayh, D-Ind., was the highest paid at $44,331. He was followed by Sen. Mark Hatfield, R-Ore., $41,955; Muskie, $40,823, and Sen. Abraham Ribicoff, D-Conn., $37,800.

Uranium Leftovers Causing Concern

By ANTHONY RIPLEY
(c) New York Times
Denver — Radioactive leftovers from uranium ore processing mills have turned up in building materials in three areas of western Colorado and are causing considerable concern as a possible health hazard.

In addition, it is thought possible that the potentially dangerous radioactive waste is being used in construction of buildings in seven other states.

The sand-like material, called mill tailings, was used extensively by builders in Grand Junction, Colo. Now it has been found in two other Colorado areas, near Durango and Rifle, according to Robert D. Seik of the Colorado Dept. Health.

An estimated 2,700 buildings are now known to have had radioactive tailings used in their construction, Seik said. Radiation from unstable elements found in tailings has been known to produce lung cancer.

Such widespread findings in Colorado have caused worries that tailings also might have been used in buildings, in seven other states where uranium mills have operated — Arizona, New Mexico, Utah, Wyoming, Texas, South Dakota and Washington.

Paul Smith of the Environmental Protection Agency's Denver radiological office said he was drawing up a proposal for studies in all affected states.

"We want to try to get the big picture," Smith said in a telephone interview. "We want to look at the whole country and once and for all clear this situation up."

He said the EPA was already studying the problem in Riverton, Wyo., where uranium mill tailings are mixed with selenium, a rare metal that is toxic to animals.

In addition, there have been reports from Salt Lake City, Utah, indicating a tailings pile in the city there has been used by builders.

The tailings contain radium, one of the natural decay products formed as uranium gives off radioactivity and changes itself into other elements.

As radium decays, it gives off a gas, called radon. Strict limits have been set for radon levels in homes.

Some uranium mills at one time gave the plentiful tailings free to builders, who used them as a smooth and compact base for laying concrete. Radon gas seeps through concrete.

The problem is clouded by a lack of scientific research on the effect of low doses of radioactivity, Smith said. Experience from Europe's mines and from a high death rate among uranium miners on the Colorado River plateau indicate cancer shows up in many cases only after 20 years.

Because of these uncertainties, no families have yet been moved, although one Grand Junction family was advised to stay out of its family room and several families have been moved from houses in Uravan, Colo., which were built on extremely old piles of tailings from a radium mine.

Israel, Too, Has Ethnic Problems

Jerusalem (AP) —A small but vocal group of Afro-Asian Jews calling themselves "Black Panthers" has jolted Israelis into the realization that they face an ethnic problem.

This organization — estimates of its membership range from 80 to 100 — has held three demonstrations in the past two months, and each has ended in a clash with police.

Its demands are stated in a Black Panther leaflet:

"We want houses, jobs and education. Why do the Russian Jews get everything? End racial discrimination against the Oriental community."

These dissidents say they eschew the methods of their American namesakes and chose the name only for its shock value.

Israelis would be incensed by the suggestion that they are racially biased. They point out that the Jews' own history of persecution makes bigotry unthinkable to them.

Gap Exists

But few will deny the immense gap that divides the European and oriental communities, each of which comprises half of Israel's nearly 3 million Jews.

When the Panthers made their debut in Jerusalem, Israelis reacted adversely. They disliked the name Black Panthers because of the hostility of black extremists in America toward Israel.

Many felt the fateful political juncture Israel had reached made this an inauspicious time for raising volatile internal issues.

But it was not difficult to discern that the social conscience of Israel's "white Jews" had been touched by the demonstrators.

The group already can claim some successes.

Premier Golda Meir apparently was quick to grasp the fact that however small the Panthers themselves might appear, they were like the tip of an iceberg.

She immediately appointed a governmental committee to study the problems of juvenile delinquency. One of the main grievances of the Panthers had been that because many oriental youths had delinquency records, they suffered police harassment. Some time later, she received Panther leaders for a private discussion.

The Israeli army also reacted promptly, announcing it would alter its policy of turning down youths with criminal pasts.

And, perhaps most important, the Panthers phenomenon galvanized the country into debate on what it officially termed poverty.

The majority of oriental Jewry immigrated to Israel between 1948 and 1952, from Yemen, Egypt, Iraq, Morocco, Syria, where many had languished in disease, illiteracy, and suffocating, archaic customs of a sixteenth-century life style.

The state of Israel had just been created and the oriental immigrants, shackled in their eastern heritage, were thrust into a country that was determined to be western. Rarely able to make productive contact with the European Establishment, the orientals congregated in the poorer areas of the cities which soon would become slums.

Mainly Laborers

The manual labor force of Israel became dominated by orientals, and it still is. The construction workers, waiters, cleaning maids and taxi drivers are mainly non-European.

So are the czars of organized crime, the majority of juvenile delinquents, and most of the families on relief.

With 23 years of statehood passed, oriental Jews find themselves constantly falling behind their European compatriots.

There is only one oriental Jew in Mrs. Meir's cabinet and none in the top military command.

Only one quarter of high school graduates — and 8% of Israel's degree holders — are non-European.

Most experts attribute the emergence of Israel's Black Panthers to two developments: the Mideast cease-fire, which has diverted public attention from border bloodshed and a wave of Soviet Jewish immigrants reaching Israel.

The almost carnival reception that the Russians have received disturbs the orientals.

"We sat under Jordanian guns for 20 years," says Ezra Mizrahi, an Iraqi-born youth who lives in a two-room apartment with four brothers in the seedy Musrara quarter of Jerusalem.

"I know the state has to help the Russian newcomers, give them housing, free education, and so forth, but what about us? We were given tents when we came here, and where are we now, 23 years later?"

Pentagon Drive 'Opens' Housing

Washington (AP) — In 1946, Lt. Daniel L. (Chappie) James, a black fighter pilot home from the war, found himself at Lockbourne Field, Ohio, with his wife, two young children and no place to live.

The only available apartment was in a black neighborhood. The landlord allowed only one child under 12 so James left his infant son with his in-laws in Alabama until he found another place.

A Negro was a Negro and a uniform meant nothing in those days, recalls James, now an Air Force brigadier general.

Four years ago the Pentagon started using economic pressure to crack down on civilian landlords. Thousands of apartments and trailer camps since have opened to Negro servicemen throughout the country.

"Today, people look more at the color green than black or white," says Frank W. Render, the Pentagon's top civil rights officer.

Render, a Negro, says that since the Pentagon started its drive to lower racial bars, 1.8 million rental units have been opened up to servicemen of all races.

When the Defense Dept. made its first national census of housing areas around military installations that year, only 245,800 rental units were found to be available to blacks and other minorities.

At that time, Render says, only 22% of landlords surveyed said they had an open housing policy. The figure is 98% today.

"On paper this looks wonderful," he says. "But we're not so naive to believe all 98% will actually rent. Some gamble that with few Negroes assigned to a base in their area, they won't come around and knock on their door."

Blacks make up 9.8% of the 2.9 million persons in uniform. Of these, about 62,000 live in off-base housing in the United States.

Render says blacks have little trouble today in finding housing. Many instances of discrimination still exist, but they are isolated.

Julius Williams, director of veterans affairs for the NAACP also says the Pentagon has made great strides in battling racial discrimination since 1968 when then Defense Secretary Clark M. Clifford called the situation disgraceful.

Clifford ordered that no member of the armed forces in the United States could rent or lease an apartment or trailer if a landlord refused to rent to any servicemen.

Civilian Fills Region 2 Post In So. Vietnam

Saigon (AP) — The U.S. Command announced Saturday that a civilian is taking over as the senior American representative in South Vietnam's central highlands and central coastal provinces, the first time since the big buildup in 1965 that that responsibility has been handed over to a civilian.

The appointment of John Paul Vann as director of the U.S. 2nd Regional Assistance Group was seen as putting more emphasis on a sensitive region which has lagged behind in pacification. Vann is considered the top pacification expert in South Vietnam.

Rain Helps Florida's Dry Areas

Miami (UPI) — Fires in the Everglades were under control for the first time in weeks Saturday, thanks to Saturday morning rainfall that helped diminish — but did not break — south Florida's lingering drought.

Rains over the state varied in amounts from a sprinkle to a downpour. Miami International Airport reported 1.20 inches of rain.

The 24-hour amounts ranged from 2.94 inches at Delray Beach on the east coast to 2.06 inches at Sarasota on the west coast. Tampa reported 1.95 inches while West Palm Beach had 1.87 inches.

Even heavier rainfall showed up in parts of the Everglades, where nearly 650,000 acres of land has been scorched by fires spawned by the worst drought in south Florida history.

"The rain we had yesterday and early today really helped, but we need six more days like this before we can reverse the drought," a forecaster at the Miami Weather Bureau said Saturday.

Nature alone was credited with the latest rainfall since cloud seeders had to take the weekend off to make repairs on their aircraft. Periodic "bombing" of rain-bearing cumulus clouds with silver iodide crystals has produced some rain in the area during the past few weeks.

Fire Ruins 2 Pittsburgh Churches

Pittsburgh, Pa. (AP) — Firemen say arson is suspected in fires that ruined two historic churches — one serving a black congregation, the other white — in the city's East Liberty section Saturday.

The blazes erupted within minutes of one another and damage to the two structures, located only about 100 yards apart, was estimated at more than $2 million.

The Rev. George L. Bowick of the Rodman Street Baptist Church watched as the flames ate through his red brick church built in 1885 and located in an area recently developed under urban renewal.

"Why would anybody destroy the church, the one thing holding this thing together?" he asked.

"We haven't been involved with an debatable issues or with politics."

Around the corner, the Rev. Edward J. Siess, pastor of Emory United Methodist Church, watched the $1.2 million stone structure, built in 1906, smolder.

"Since July, we have been stepping up our program in the community," he said.

3 Every Minute

Manila (AP) — Two congressmen campaigning for a national birth control program said three babies are born every minute in the Philippines.

"We have a school for 40 retarded children in one area of the educational wings. In January, in cooperation with the East End Cooperative, we started a daily breakfast program for Peabody High School students — both black and whites.

"I don't know what we'll do to start again, but we'll do something.

"It's sad, I guess, about the building," he said. "But buildings are material. People are more important."

Over 100 firemen battled the blazes for about three hours. Roofs caved in on both structures.

Britain and the Common Market

While the European currency crisis has dominated the headlines this week, another development in Brussels should prove more significant in the long run. Great Britain's entry into the European Economic Community (EEC), or Common Market, now appears virtually assured.

Fourteen years after EEC was founded, eight years after President DeGaulle vetoed London's first bid for membership, major obstacles to Britain's entry have at least been removed. Negotiators have reached agreement on phasing British agriculture into EEC over a five-year period, on protecting Commonwealth sugar interests, and on a formula by which Britain's financial contribution to the EEC can be bargained.

That the idea of British membership has endured so long through so many difficulties testifies to its basic soundness.

Europe's best hope for peace and prosperity has always lain in unity. And a Europe from which Britain is excluded is clearly not unified. Britain is, in fact, the key to unity. If it joins EEC, so too will other nations now members of the second major economic confederation, the European Free Trade Assn.

Economic union remains the base of the EEC at this time, but political union to some degree is the ultimate goal. The advantages of both are obvious—greater realization of the industrial potential of Europe, an avenue of settling disputes, as means to act in concert of matters of common interest, and a collective position in world affairs that none of the member nations could achieve alone.

America's interest in the Common Market is the same today as it was in 1957. A stable and prospering Europe is necessary to the peace and progress of all the world. And it is no secret that Washington likes the thought of its old friend and ally, Great Britain, sitting as a full member of the councils of Europe.

There are still anti-market forces, both within and outside Britain. Some French Gaullists would still prefer to see the country across the channel excluded. A poll shows 59% of Britons doubtful about the economic impact of membership. But if negotiations are pushed rapidly beyond their present hopeful stage, opposition can be overcome.

The best role the United States can play at this time is to encourage, quietly and diplomatically, both France and Britain to proceed positively and speedily. There should be no more delay toward the dream of centuries—a united Europe.

It Could Happen In Lincoln

There is lots of news about transportation in the cities but most of it is bad news. So it was like a breath of fresh air to read a success story.

The Des Moines Tribune tells it this way: "The public-owned transit company in Sioux City is writing a bright chapter in what otherwise is the bleak story of city bus service in Iowa and in the nation."

"At a time when most bus companies are losing passengers, the Sioux City operation gained almost 10% more riders in the first three months of this year over the same period in 1970. The city-owned bus line's 1969 deficit of $159,000 was cut in half last year and is being reduced further in the first few months of 1971."

"The city's residents voted in late 1968 to buy the bus system from a private company, which had demanded a higher city subsidy. Bonds were issued to pay for the bus company and are being financed by local taxes."

"New buses were purchased with federal help. Bus routes were 'zigzagged' to pick up additional customers. Routes were synchronized through a newly acquired downtown terminal. Bus drivers have received special courtesy instruction. Bus lines manager W. N. Davis promoted the city system in speeches before service clubs, church and school groups."

All of this has not happened without a rise in fares, adults to 40 cents from 30 cents and children from 15 to 20.

The situations prior to city ownership and the city acquisitions of the bus systems in Lincoln and Sioux City are remarkably similar. Sioux City is three years ahead of Lincoln and what it has done with city ownership of the bus system could very well be the key to Sioux City's success.

It could happen in Lincoln too, but it is something that is not likely to happen automatically and Sioux City's experience may be worth emulating.

A Navy Breakthrough

By ART BUCHWALD

Washington — There was so much publicity attached to the announcement last week when the U.S. Navy promoted its first black officer to rear admiral that little attention was paid to another breakthrough in rigid Navy tradition. With no little pride the Navy announced that it had appointed its first white Anglo-Saxon Protestant waiter to serve in a U.S. Navy officers' mess.

The lucky seaman was John Paul Jones VII of Akron, Ohio.

Up until Seaman Jones' appointment as mess boy, only Filipino and black sailors were permitted to serve naval officers. But after a secret Defense Dept. race relations report, it was decided that if the Navy was going to have black admirals it would have to have white mess boys to even things out.

Although the U.S. Army, Air Force and Marine Corps all use WASP mess attendants, the Navy, according to the report, had been dragging its feet. The Navy kept saying that it couldn't find any qualified WASP seamen to wait on officers' tables. But the report found that mess boys in the Navy were not being selected according to qualifications, but according to race.

"There are many white sailors who are as good at serving officers as blacks and Filipinos," the report stated. "They have just not been given the opportunity to prove it. It is our opinion that if the U.S. Navy hopes to recruit more members of the Anglo-Saxon race, it had better open up its kitchen and pantries to Caucasian servicemen."

Stung by the report, the Navy denied that John Paul Jones VII had been appointed to serve in an officers' mess because he was white.

"Jones," a Navy spokesman said, "was selected because he was the most qualified waiter we could find."

"I'll admit," he said, "it sounds like a coincidence, but the U.S. Navy, and you are going to have to take my word for this, has been looking for qualified WASP mess boys for the last 192 years."

Seaman Jones was asked if he expected to find any hostility among the other mess boys.

"Perhaps at first, but I'm going to prove that WASP's can do anything Filipinos can. I feel I represent every white Anglo-Saxon Protestant whose dream it has been for 192 years to serve in Navy officers' messes on land as well as on sea. This is a golden opportunity, and I plan to make the most of it."

After the press conference Seaman John Paul Jones VII was taken to the White House, where President Nixon presented him with a white mess jacket and an aluminum tray. Witnessing the scene was Jones' father, a retired U.S. Navy admiral, who at the end of the ceremony broke into tears.

WILLIAM O. DOBLER

Not An Unhappy Society

The people of Lincoln, by and large, are fairly content with at least some fundamental aspects of life. This can be concluded from the Goals and Policies Committee of Lincoln-Lancaster County.

The purpose of the survey was to find out what the people of this area thought of the place where they live, including both public and private matters. From this, it is hoped that the committee can develop both long and short-range goals for making Lincoln as nearly as possible what a majority of the people want it to be.

Housing, of course, is a fundamental aspect of life and questions on this were asked of citizens. It was surprising to learn that 87% of the respondents preferred single family residential living.

This is surprising because the high-rise apartment complex, mobile homes and other kinds of facilities have climbed tremendously in popularity in recent years. But obviously, none of these kinds of living units offers the overall that is found with the single family residence.

Why this is so, we can only guess but we suspect that it is the natural individuality of people that accounts for it. Most people like single-family ownership because of the total independence of the thing.

With your own home, you can do as you please and you can inject into your home your own personality, likes and dislikes. Through your own home, you can express yourself as you cannot in any other way.

And 58% of the respondents said that, given a choice, they would remain in their present residence. Apparently, there is no widespread dissatisfaction with housing in Lincoln, recognizing of course that such things as minority and low-income housing are another matter.

And a small 11% of people would move from Lancaster County if they could while 12% would move from an urban to a rural area. And why do people live where they do?

So much is heard these days about the appeal of the temperature zones of the nation that you might think everyone was holding his breath to move to Arizona or California. Such is not the case with Lincolniters.

Our people say they like living here for a very good reason — the area being a good place to raise children. Second in importance was job opportunities and 41% of the respondents listed climate as "not important" to them.

Generally speaking, you might say it is the way of life here that has meaning for people and that is a pretty encouraging testimonial. There appears to be far more contentment and satisfaction among the people of this area than we might be led to believe by the many problems that seem constantly to present themselves.

The way of life here may be somewhat of an abstraction but it takes on meaning in a great many ways. It is something we have that a lot of other areas of the nation cannot lay claim to.

Macao Lives in Red China's Shadow

By DAVID J. PAINE, AP

BAYONET fixed, the Communist Chinese border guard steps slowly along the bank of the small island 50 yards across the muddy inlet from Macao. He stops to watch as a taxi arrives on the opposite bank and an American tourist gets out to ogle him. Unhurriedly, he paces back to the round, yellow blockhouse and stares through the square window across what is known as Duck Channel.

A short distance away in the casino of the newly-built Hotel Lisboa, a corpulent Chinese importer from Hong Kong who has been playing blackjack through the night and has lost $6,000 wearily withdraws from the table.

Macao, in an age of dwindling imperialism and colonialism, is an anomaly. It is a relic of the bygone era of gunboat diplomacy when European powers contested trading rights along the China coast.

Part of the Chinese mainland 40 miles west of Hong Kong, it has been a Portuguese territory since 1557 and for centuries was a major gateway to China.

It was here on July 3, 1844, that the first treaty between China and the United States was signed, the Treaty of Wang Hsia declaring "perfect, permanent, universal peace" between the two countries.

Shadow of China

The tiny, six-square-mile outpost of Portugal exists in the shadow of the Communist Chinese giant.

Portugal and Red China do not recognize each other but the Portuguese administration in Macao treads gingerly to avoid upsetting either the Chinese Communists in its own backyard or the ones across the border.

There was a short-lived showdown in late 1966 and early 1967 when local Communists, influenced by the growing Cultural Revolution in China, rioted and eight were killed by police. It was a major turning point in the history of Macao, which since then has bowed to Communist influence.

Peking backed the rioters and the price the Portuguese paid for a peaceful settlement included an abject apology for their actions, a guarantee that police and troops never again would fire on Chinese, suspension of all Nationalist Chinese activities in Macao and the barring of refugees fleeing mainland China. A number of refugees Peking wanted back were returned.

A Westerner living in Macao since before the riots estimates there are only about 500 hard-core Communists and another 2,000 active sympathizers. With Red China hovering in the background, they are powerful enough to call the tune in the territory. For demonstrations they can put on the streets thousands of people, including children from Communist-run schools.

Backwater

But Macao is peaceful, a quiet backwater of cobbled streets, narrow alleys adorned with myriad Chinese signs, temples with incense-laden air and pedicabs.

Young lovers stroll at night along the Rua do Praia Grande, a handsome boulevard skirting the water's edge. Angular junks glide gracefully around the point past the old fortress of San Tiago da Barra, built in 1629.

Macao has no airport and the constant silting of its harbor as mud swirls down the Yellow River precludes all vessels except those with a shallow draft. Visitors must travel first to Hong Kong and go from there to Macao by hydrofoil or the slower ferry.

In 1960, according to a census, Macao had a population of 169,299. Swelled by tens of thousands of refugees who streamed in from Communist China in the early and middle 60s, this figure is now estimated at 300,000.

Perhaps only 2,000 including most of the 600-odd military contingent, are pure Portuguese. About 5,000 are Macanese, a Portuguese-Chinese mixture often also including strains picked up in other parts of Asia as the Portuguese over the centuries wandered further into the Orient.

Close to 98% of the population are

Macao, a six-square-mile territory of Portugal known as "the Monte Carlo of the East" because of its gambling, lies within shouting distance of the border of Communist China.

Chinese and few speak Portuguese. Even English is more widely spoken, yet the Portuguese in Macao remain proud of their traditions and their past.

"We have been here for more than four centuries, you know," a young government official says. "We have a duty to remain in Macao and carry on."

Portuguese Food

Portuguese architecture is evident everywhere in Macao. Portuguese wines and traditional foods like Bacalhau (codfish) can be obtained as easily as rice and noodles — except when someone forgets to renew supplies specially shipped in from Lisbon.

The Portuguese administration is headed by Gov. Jose Manuel de Sousa e Faro Nobre de Carvalho, who had a torrid baptism in the territory when he was confronted with the major disturbances of December 1966 only six days after arriving in Macao.

Two of the most important figures in Macao are Chinese both bearing the name Ho. They are not related.

One is Ho Yin, 63, a millionaire with strong Communist connections who is Peking's front man in dealings with the Portuguese administration.

The other is Stanley Ho, 49, also a millionaire and head of the gambling syndicate which operates Macao's four casinos.

Ho Yin, the most influential Chinese in Macao, is the Chinese people's representative on the Macao legislative council. He is a member of the wealthy syndicates which import gold and control the popular dog racing and allied totalisator betting.

Because of its casinos, Macao has been given labels like "the poor man's Las Vegas" and "the Monte Carlo of the East."

Three of the casinos, including one on a three-story vessel looking like a riverboat without a paddle, offer Western-style gambling like blackjack, baccarat, roulette and craps as well as Chinese games like fan tan and high-low dice. The fourth casino has exclusively Chinese gambling.

Foreign Gamblers

Most of the big gamblers are Hong Kong Chinese and a few other foreigners.

Stanley Ho, who heads the syndicate of businessmen holding the casino monopoly, says the syndicate pays about $944,000 a year to the administration for the monopoly and in addition to sinking money into investments such as hotels, it is obliged to spend about $166,000 annually on harbor dredging and other public works.

He says the casinos' gross profit averages $5 million to $6.7 million a year.

Some Macao people disapprove of the heavy gambling at the casinos and at the Canidrome dogtrack, where Australian bred and trained greyhounds draw big crowds who bet heavily.

But the gambling, through monopoly payments and taxes, pays for one-sixth of the budget, directly or indirectly supports a good chunk of the population, and is a main attraction for streams of free-spending tourists. Without it Macao would face a financial crisis.

The economy of the Portuguese territory leans heavily on tourism and gambling and there is comparatively little industry. Textiles, fireworks and plastics are the main exports.

Despite the January, 1967, agreement whereby Portugal promised to return all refugees from Red China, some still slip through the net to Macao. Best estimates put their number at about 20 a month, but no one can be sure about this shadowy traffic.

Portuguese authorities for the record stick to the rules about sending them back but in actual fact turn a blind eye wherever possible.

Refugees

Heavy Communist patrols at places like Duck Channel, a one time popular escape route, and gray Communist gunboats ostentatiously anchored a few hundred yards off Macao do not stop the refugees.

Macao has a refugee population estimated at 80,000. One person in every four is a refugee. Most left China legally between 1949 and 1966.

For many of the refugees, Macao is only a stopover on the way to Hong Kong. Hong Kong, with its heavier industrialization and chances of a better paying job, together with the lure of brighter lights, holds more for them than Macao can offer. They also feel safer from the Red Chinese in Hong Kong than in Macao.

They pay $100 to $200, or more, to be smuggled into Hong Kong in junks or other small vessels known as "snakeboats." Outnumbering them on the crowded boats are young people from Macao who are barred by the British colony's immigration laws from legally moving to Hong Kong but are lured by the same hopes of a better life that draw the refugees.

Wages are poor in Macao. Girls working in textile factories on Taipa Island get about $67 a month, with only one day off in that time. In Hong Kong they can earn perhaps half again as much while working a six-day week.

A junk, framed by trees, passes around the tip of Macao peninsula. Visible in the background is Taipa Island, one of the two islands which form part of Macao.

Nebraska's Fourth Estate

Many of the state's editorial writers spent much space discussing LB573, the property tax relief bill designed to relieve the owners of business and agriculture equipment as well as inventories.

The York News Times, in discussing the Exon decision to veto the bill, said that the bill poses a dilemma for the governor.

On the one hand, the York writer finds, Exon has portrayed himself as a "friend of the farmer." But, the editorial continues, "now that he has the opportunity to give his farmer friends particularly the tax relief we think they are entitled to, Exon is going to veto the bill because it would require increases in the sales or income taxes."

"We would guess," the York editorial states, "the farmer, and perhaps some businessmen will be mystified by his statements."

To conclude, the News Times offered support for a broader sales or income tax in order to make up the revenue lost if the property tax relief bill had not been vetoed.

Offering support for the governor was the Grand Island Independent which said that although the newspaper had found little to agree with the governor on previously, "this time we'd have to say we think he's correct. This bill does provide too much personal property tax relief, too soon."

Writing about the Exon dilemma on another front was the Tri-City Tribune (Gothenburg-Cozad), which speculated on the legislative passage of "greatly expanded state aid to local school districts," which the Tribune said would mean "real property tax relief, across the board for owners of all types of property."

However, the newspaper pointed out that "here, too, Exon is boxed into a position of having to veto the measure in order to make good on his promise not to raise sales and income taxes."

The North Platte Telegraph, on another topic — that of tourism — struck out at the Legislature.

"The Legislature," the North Platte writer found, "has been casually, carelessly, capriciously, irresponsibly destroying what few tools Nebraska had for digging from this tourist rush (across Interstate 80) a share of the economic gold it contains."

What brought such harsh language from the writer was last week's action in which the state senators voted to create a new department of tourism, but also voted to eliminate "the only real possibility for funding" that department or any other tourism activity "adequately." "That was the space tax proposed in LB680," which would have added a 1% tax to the charge for motel and hotel rooms, the Telegraph wrote.

Override Veto

Beatrice — A successful economy is based on a balance between labor and capital investment. Labor is dependent upon capital being invested in factories and industry, just as capital must have a good labor supply.

Nebraska's present high property and inventory tax system is driving industry away and our laboring people are losers as are other segments of our economy.

Taxes can be paid only out of income and industries should be taxed on their incomes rather than the amount of inventory they have in their possession on Jan. 1.

Many high income people have little tangible property and escape the high property taxes, while factories and industries which provide the jobs may have trouble showing a profit, but they are obligated to large property tax assessments each year.

The poll, conducted for The Sunday Journal and Star by a professional polling organization, was an attempt to learn public opinion on the local level just as such polls are carried out on the national level. The result had nothing to do with the editorial opinion of the newspaper. As it happened, the results of the poll were very close to those of the actual election. The poll showed Sam Schwartzkopf getting 63% of the vote; he ended up with 65%. The poll showed 77% favoring the bus bond issue; it got 77.5% of the vote. —Editor.

City Hall Sometimes Shows Engineers the Best Approach

By GEOFFREY GOULD
(c) Newhouse News Service
Washington — Modern technology can help solve many nagging city problems — such as garbage pickup and firefighting — and save money in the process, but there still is a big credibility gap between the men with the know-how and the politicians in city hall.

Part of the fault lies with city officials' reliance on the old tried and true ways — many cities still have men sweeping gutters with brooms — and part with companies that fear an idea requiring new products may not pay off commercially.

The Urban Institute, a privately-supported nonprofit Washington organization, cites examples in a recent survey of the difficulties of bringing engineering and politics together.

First a success story: Scottsdale, Ariz., which has grown from 10,000 to 70,000 in the last 10 years, was concerned about the expense of trash and garbage removal. A city council study found 70% of the cost was in picking up the trash, not getting rid of it. Most of the job was done by manual labor, with four or five men jumping on and off conventional garbage trucks to dump two of three cans of trash at each house.

So a new approach was tried: Why not put out one huge, six-foot-deep plastic garbage container for every four houses that would be picked up in one easy motion by a hydraulic arm and dumped into the truck.

No Gamblers

But no company wanted to gamble on developing the unique plastic containers or new-type truck.

So, with much red tape, Scottsdale invested $100,000, got a matching grant from Health, Education and Welfare Dept. and built the truck itself from parts from old garbage trucks. It added a flexible arm that grabbed the container, lifted it over the truck, dumped it and put it back on the curb. The first truck was dubbed "Godzilla," for a horror-film monster, and the improved second version was "Son of Godzilla."

The city then found a man who made plastic pickle vats in his back yard who agreed to try garbage containers. But he used the wrong kind of plastic and they quickly fell apart. Finally a suitable container was developed.

One truck operator then could do the work of four or five men in half the time. Costs were cut nearly in half, and with a $200,000 investment the city will save $350,000 a year.

Scottsdale also took care to see that the displaced sanitation men moved up to better jobs — bank tellers, firemen and so on — through on-the-job training and a higher education course. Other cities are copying the idea, and now industry is interested.

Attempt Failed

Now a nonsuccess story: Computer experts have long felt traffic control could be improved using computers that measure where cars are piling up and adjust signal lights accordingly, rather than the present simple staggering of light sequences.

But four or five companies tried and failed. The equipment they produced was either too simple or too expensive. Some companies went bankrupt. New York City was saddled with a $95 million unfulfilled contract, and other cities had similar disasters.

Now a happy ending: slippery water. For years firemen have used 3½-inch canvas hoses with heavy brass fittings. It took too long to haul the hoses into position. Even improved synthetic hoses were little better.

Dr. Edward Blum, a chemical engineer, suggested using a high polymer chemical, known for 20 years, that had the quality of making water more "slippery," reducing the friction of moving it through a hose. Small amounts of this polymer injected into the water could increase the flow 80 to 100%. Again, industry was not interested.

New York City, after much hesitation and some resistance from the fire department, tried it. In tests, the hoses were reduced to 1½-inch size and squirted twice as much water with the polymer as without.

The cost of using the polymer was estimated at $100,000 a year. The cost-effectiveness ratio is 200 to 1 compared to the cost of adding enough firemen to do the same job.

So New York is ordering polymer injection on 100 of its pumps and they go into action this year. And now Union Carbide, at last seeing a nationwide market, is manufacturing the chemical under the trade mark "Rapid Water."

American Baptists OK Withdrawal Resolution

Minneapolis (UPI) — Delegates to the 67th annual meeting of the American Baptist Convention (ABC) Saturday overwhelmingly approved a resolution calling for the withdrawal of "all U.S. military personnel from Indochina except those in diplomatic service at an early date, hopefully by Dec. 31, 1971."

The vote on the resolution was 1,451 to 199, with 33 abstentions.

The Indochina resolution praised President Nixon and Congress for cutting the $24 billion military budget for Indochina in half and withdrawing 280,000 troops.

But it expressed "deep agony" for the "massive bombing" and its results.

"We also believe that the continuing war is contributing to anarchy in our streets, fostering drug addiction throughout our society, weakening our economy and destroying our national unity," the statement said.

The group also overwhelmingly accepted a resolution criticizing the "justice-a-word" system in this country.

"The present system focuses upon punishment rather than rehabilitation," the statement said.

The resolution recommended many courses of action for the denomination's members, including citizen task forces of "court-watchers" to observe day-to-day procedures and talk with judges and other officials "who can assist in pressing for reform."

Russian Fishing Fleet Chief Agrees to Talks

Boston (UPI) — The commander of the Russian fishing fleet off the East Coast agreed Saturday to meet U.S. government officials to discuss alleged harassment of American lobster boats by Soviet trawlers.

A spokesman for the National Marine Fisheries Service (NMFS) said the Russian commander asked the Americans to set a time and place for the meeting.

A date, "perhaps mid-week," will probably be agreed upon Sunday, said John Skerry, regional head of the NMFS division of enforcement and surveillance.

Representatives of the State Dept., Coast Guard, NMFS and the American lobster industry plan to attend the meeting.

The Pat-San-Marie was the victim Friday of the seventh reported incident of harassment of U.S. lobster boats by Soviet trawlers in the past 10 days.

The captain of the American boat reported about 15 Russian fishing vessels ran through its gear, causing an estimated $2,500 in damages. Damages to a sister ship, the Wily Fox, are estimated at $50,000 in six incidents since May 5.

'Preventive Detention' Tests Ahead

(C) Knight Newspapers Inc.
Washington — This city's unique power to jail "dangerous" defendants without giving them a trial will be sharply tested in court in the next few weeks. The outcome could affect the future of criminal justice throughout the nation.

There are five men now being preventively detained, because their conduct convinced local judges that they were a threat to others. The evidence was strong enough to show they were probably guilty and should be denied the right to bail.

Their identities and the charges against them are unknown because the hearings were held in secret. The reason for denying pre-trial publicity was to keep news of the detention out of their trial.

The Public Defender Service of Washington has challenged the law on the grounds that it deprives defendants of their liberty without trial or the right to face their accusers and is not used anywhere else but in the District of Columbia.

So far the Justice Dept.'s only reply has been that the court lacked jurisdiction and that the Public Defender Service had no right to challenge the law.

The "preventive detention" law was originally part of a package designed by the Nixon administration for all federal courts in the U.S. But Congress limited it to Washington as a "demonstration" program.

Few known defendants have been held. Some have been detained for part of the 60 days allowed under the law but then released. One escaped while waiting to be confined. One was ordered detained and then released two weeks later when a grand jury failed to find sufficient evidence to indict him. During that last case, U.S. District Court Judge Gerhard A. Gesell denounced the use of secrecy in the hearings and warned that the practice would "grow and spread like a cancer."

According to attorneys for the Public Defender Service, there are now five persons being held under the law.

Last Wednesday Sen. Sam Ervin, D-N.C., called upon the Justice Dept. to abandon preventive detention and instead support his bill which requires a trial within 60 days for all defendants in federal courts.

Ervin, chief critic of the bill in congress last year, called it "unpardonable to carry out the experimentation in secret."

Gallup Poll Kennedy Emerges as Favorite Of Democratic Rank and File

Princeton, N.J. — Despite the fact that Sen. Edward Kennedy has disclaimed any interest in seeking the 1972 Democratic presidential nomination, he may still become the candidate to beat for the Democratic nomination next year.

According to the latest Gallup survey of rank-and-file Democrats, Kennedy is the first choice of 29% nationwide. His lead is 8 points over his nearest rival, Sen. Edmund Muskie. Running a close third with 18% is Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey. Ten other possibilities, including the late, Sen. George McGovern, are grouped far back of the front runners.

Gallup interviewers showed respondents a list of 13 men who have figured prominently in the speculation over the 1972 presidential nomination. The respondents were then asked:

"Which one of the men on this list would you like to see nominated as the Democratic candidate for President in 1972?"

Interviewing was completed April 25 with 1,599 respondents in more than 300 scientifically selected communities.

Here are the choices of the 553 persons in the survey, who called themselves Democrats and who indicated that they were registered to vote:

Friend of Boy Nominations Are Solicited

The Lincoln Optimist Club is accepting nominations from the community for its annual Club of the Boy award.

A club spokesman said anyone may nominate a person for the award on the basis of the person's voluntary interest in and service to boys in any capacity other than because the nominee's profession or occupation requires it.

Nominations should be sent no later than Monday to the Optimist Club of Lincoln in care of Mark A. Buchholz, 610 Anderson Bldg., Lincoln, Neb. 68508.

Tourism Clinic Slated Tuesday

A tourism clinic, sponsored jointly by the Lincoln Chamber of Commerce and the Nebraska Petroleum Council, will be Tuesday at 7 p.m. at the Villager.

Jack Hart, chairman of the Chamber's conventions and tourism committee, said the special training session is open to those who meet the public, especially tourists, on a regular basis.

"In 1970, 102,000 convention delegates visited Lincoln. Add to this the thousands of tourists who pass through Lincoln each summer on vacations and it is easy to see why the Chamber is interested in maintaining and increasing Lincoln's visitor business," Hart said.

FTC to Study Impact of Ads on Consumers

Washington (AP)—The Federal Trade Commission has scheduled a series of hearings for next fall to probe the impact of advertising on consumers.

Robert Pitofsky, head of the FTC Bureau of Consumer Affairs, said the hearings would give special attention to television commercials, particularly those that are aimed at children.

In addition to advertising aimed at children, the FTC probe will attempt "to determine whether television advertising may unfairly exploit desires, fears and anxieties," and "whether technical aspects of the preparation and production of television commercials may facilitate deception."

One of the main concerns of the FTC is deceptive advertising, which is barred as an unfair trade practice under the Federal Trade Commission Act. In the past year the commission has brought numerous cases against firms whose advertising the FTC feels contains unprovable claims or false statements.

Pitofsky said the hearings, to begin with a session in Washington on Sept. 13 and continue with hearings in other major cities at later dates.

Huskers Down ISU, 86-59

Rager Seeks Lifelong Goal

Ames, Iowa — Hopeton Gordon won the long and triple jumps in leading Nebraska to an 86-59 win over Iowa State in a dual track meet here Saturday afternoon.

Gordon, the meet's only double winner, took the long jump with a leap of 24-9 and the triple jump at 48 3/4. In the long jump he beat the Cyclones' Vernie Hawkins by an inch.

The Huskers swept all three places in the 880 and won the 440 and mile relays to counter balance Iowa State sweeps in the javelin and discus.

Nebraska won the meet with its depth by earning two places in seven of the 17 events.

440 relay — Nebraska (Doug Marcy, Leighton Priestley, Jim Novak, Horace Levy), T—:42.2.

Mile — Dan Speck, NU; 2. Hall, NU; 3. Schneider, ISU, T—4:16.1.

Javelin — 1. Van Holloway, ISU; 2. Scherer, ISU; 3. Levatis, ISU, D—224-2.

Long jump — 1. Hopeton Gordon, NU; 2. Hawkins, ISU; 3. Leonard, NU. D—48-0.

High jump — 1. Howard Burns, NU; 2. Eymann, NU; 3. Hallaway, ISU. T—5-14.2.

Triple jump — 1. Gordon, NU; 2. Anderson, ISU; 3. Leonard, NU. D—48-0.

Mile relay — Nebraska (Wes Leonard, Bob Pierce, John Mottley, Leighton Priestley), T—3:17.4.

By RANDY YORK
Roger Rager minces no words about what he wants to do the rest of his life.

"I want to go all the way to the top. I won't be happy unless I make it to the big time," the Lincoln super modified race car driver says.

"But at the same time," he adds, "I want to make sure I'm ready for it because it's pretty hard to get a second chance, if you ever make it. I'm confident, but cautious. You've got to get the right break."

At age 22, Roger seems to be making the breaks himself. Although he drives regularly at Topeka, Knoxville, Iowa; and Eagle, Roger has competed in as many as 15 states.

"There's more exposure when you travel," Roger admits, "and you never know when you're going to meet the right person."

The ex-Gering High school football and wrestling standout, who is off to a fast start this year, believes he "learns something every night I race."

Seward (AP)—Concordia Teachers College won the tennis title and Northwestern, Iowa, the golf title here Saturday in Tri-State Conference meets.

The host Bulldogs took five first places, a second and a third in seven events to score 80 points in the tennis competition. Dana finished second with 56 points, Midland was third with 50, Westmar fourth with 18 and Sioux Falls last with 10.

The Vikings from Blair were also second in the golf meet with 638 strokes to 623 for winner Northwestern.

Tennis
Singles: No. 1—Terry Jacobson, Midland. No. 2—Bob Volez, Concordia. No. 3—Dennis Gettleass, Concordia. No. 4—Ken Boergers, Concordia. No. 5—Dave Reed, Concordia.
Doubles: No. 1—Terry Jacobson and Charlie Lamb, Midland. No. 2—Dennis Gettleass and Ken Boergers, Concordia.

Roger Rager Sets Big Goals

"A guy that can run in the top three here in Lincoln (at Eagle) or at Knoxville can win anywhere in the country in super modified racing," Roger asserts.

Wasting little time creating a winning image, Roger won the first IMCA (International Motor Car Association) race in which he ever competed.

"It was 1968 at Webster City, Iowa," Roger recalls. "I had won the B feature and started in 12th position for the A feature. I'm more proud of that race than any other one because I beat Jerry Blundy, Jay Woodside, Dick Sutcliffe and Stacy Redman."

Roger, however, has continued to improve since his impressive and illegal debut at age 18.

"It may sound egotistical, but I think I've gone further in four years than a lot of guys have gone," Roger offers.

"I like to consider myself a hard charger," he adds.

"Nothing is going to hold me back," he vows. "I was three years old when my dad gave me a helmet and goggles for my pedal car, and I guess I've just never lost the urge to race."

That's why he'll be driving tonight at 8 at Eagle Raceway in car No. 1, which he believes will carry more than symbolic significance.

While the super-modifieds are going at Eagle the Midwest Speedway again features late model stock cars. Action begins at 8 p.m. at each track.

Boston Writers Filing Protest

Boston (AP) — The Boston Baseball Writers Association said it will file a formal protest with the American League because of a television invasion of the Baltimore bullpen during Saturday's game with Boston.

The nationally televised game was delayed at the start of the sixth inning while a TV camera was taken to the Orioles' bullpen in right field. Sportscaster Tony Kubek and three other TV crew members entered the bullpen and Kubek chatted with the players.

Canoe Water 'Ideal'

Hardy outdoorsmen with a yen for adventure should find the Platte River in central Nebraska of special interest the next few weeks, as a substantial flow of water is making the river ideal for canoeing.

Game and Parks Commission men in the field report that the usually shallow river's channels are running full, so canoes can move along almost at will without running aground. Best areas appear to be the Platte below the outlet of Johnson Lake a few miles below Lexington.

The high water conditions are the result of the melting of snow in the mountain regions of the North and South Platte drainages. All reservoirs on the streams are full or nearly so, and most of the water is being passed downstream. At Lake McConaughy, the Tri-County Irrigation District is releasing 5,500 cubic feet of water per second, which accounts for much of the flow downstream.

However, such a trip is not for the entire family, especially if pre-teen children or grandpa and grandpa are involved. Canoeing on the river can be strenuous and is best left to more vigorous teenagers and adults. The sortie should provide many rewards, however, as the scenery is at its spring-time peak and wildlife is abundant.

Canoeists should remember that most of the land on both banks is private property. While state law allows portages around an obstacle such as a fence or falls by the most direct route without asking permission, all other entrance on private land is covered by laws governing trespassing. Even islands and sandbars are usually private property.

Rest stops and overnight camp sites should be scouted in advance and permission to use them obtained before setting out. A look at maps on hand in county offices should provide information valuable in navigating the river, planning such stops, and determining the owners of land involved.

NP, Blair, Hastings SC, Thedford Win at First Gals State Track Meet

North Platte, Blair, Hastings St. Cecilia and Thedford won team titles at the first girls' state track meet in Grand Island Saturday.

The Class A title went to North Platte, Class B to Blair, Class C to St. Cecilia and Class D to Thedford.

Beile In Accident

Fred Beile, the assistant track coach at Doane, was hurt in a car accident on the way home from the Nebraska Intercollegiate Athletic Conference meet in Blair.

Beile was in intensive care for several days but six Doane athletes, who were in the car with Beile, received only minor injuries.

Jensen Ousted

Max Jensen was eliminated from an American Bowling Congress tournament in Detroit.

Jensen defeated PBA pro Don Helling, 3-1, but lost the four-game series on total pins and was eventually eliminated. He also met Ron Chader in the double elimination and won with a 316 series but was then eliminated by Mike Totsky.

Swanson Award

Nebraska's newly-created chapter of the National Football Foundation and Hall of Fame created a memorial to the late Clarence E. Swanson, former star Nebraska player and member of the NU Board of Regents.

The award will be made annually to the person in the state who has made contributions to further intercollegiate football.

Trailsmoke

by Bob Munger

Bruce Cowgill of Silver Creek, the projectile-like driving force behind the "Aces for Wildlife" program, is at it again — this time collecting another railroad for his showcase of those joining in his pet project.

Burlington Northern is the latest addition to the lineup.

Storming the bastions of a railroad's executive offices is not new to Cowgill, he had already successfully gotten the Union Pacific Railroad to halt burning, mowing and spraying of its right-of-way in an effort to provide more homes for wildlife.

So he arranged an interview with Richard A. Beulke, vice president of the Burlington Northern for the area that includes Nebraska, an interview in which he showed his slide and tape program.

Beulke bought the idea.

Burning to Halt

"Burlington Northern will cooperate in connection with the protection of our wildlife in the state, and intends to follow a program of clearing company right-of-way by burning with less frequency than heretofore," Beulke stated.

"It is anticipated that the burning of our right-of-way will be discontinued altogether in the future in the interest of environmental improvement, and that brush and other heavy growth of vegetation will be eliminated only in those areas where they interfere with the maintenance of our track.

"Weed spraying will be confined to the track area itself," he said.

Beulke noted that by following these practices, it was his sincere hope that Nebraska wildlife resources would be enhanced by providing additional cover, and that this contribution "will be beneficial to the state and its environment."

Cowgill's program is a simple one, and therein lies a large part of its success. He is convinced that cover is the key to increasing wildlife populations, and further that the available cover is disappearing rapidly. His goal is to get set aside at least one acre on every farm in the state and not to mow it, burn it or knock down the cover in any way.

Cowgill Keeps Going

In addition he has gone after the "biggies." He has gotten the State Dept. of Roads to discontinue mowing all except the first 15 feet of right-of-way. He has gotten several power districts and irrigation districts to leave cover undisturbed on their property, and has added the two railroads in Nebraska that span the state to join in the program.

But even this doesn't satisfy the Silver Creek conservationist.

He is taking the program nationwide. In March he showed it at the North American Wildlife Conference in Portland, Ore., to career conservationists, and met with a warm welcome.

In June he is on the workshop program of the Outdoor Writers Association of America, Inc., in Pensacola, Fla., where he hopes to excite the outdoor writers of the nation in ballyhooing his project.

It is said no hill is too steep for a determined climber, and Cowgill shows every indication of determination.

Trap League Begins Firing

The Industrial Trap League of the Izaak Walton League began firing last Wednesday, and a booming sendoff it was indeed. A total of 48 teams are banging away, and with from five or six to 10 men on every team it was a noisy inaugural. Only five shoot per team per round, but that's still 240 shooting in two nights.

Ikes' trap chairman Duane Hamm reports that more than 400 in total are signed up for league shooting.

Hamm also is interested in forming a Junior Trap League, and he plans more than just shooting. Included will be instruction in gun handling, safety and shooting etiquette. Scheduled to begin on June 8, the league is open to boys and girls 17 years old and younger.

In other trapshooting news, the Lincoln Gun Club on North 48th Street is beginning a series of practices, open to the public. The shoots are scheduled for Thursdays beginning at 5 p.m. and lasting until dark.

Club member Tom Trautt says the skeet range will also be open for those with a yen to sharpen their eye.

ADM Effluent Meeting Topic

Mayor Sam Schwartzkopf has expressed dissatisfaction with the willingness of Archer-Daniels-Midland (ADM) to clean up the sewage it dumps into city lagoons in northeast Lincoln.

A meeting between city officials and ADM representatives, set after the city learned the firm's effluent was 80 times stronger than the legal limit, apparently produced little progress and Schwartzkopf said the firm did not come up with any solutions.

Citizens have repeatedly complained of worse than usual smells in the area.

NEBRASKA AND MARKS

Gov. J. J. Exon's veto of a bill making it a misdemeanor for motorcycle operators to operate their machines without a safety helmet was upheld in an override attempt.

The Legislature voted down a proposal to allow the rank-and-file, rather than political party leaders, to pick some national convention delegates. . . . The Nebraska State Patrol has won first place in the state police division of the National Safety Council's 40th national fleet safety contest. . . . statistics have shown that residents of three counties — Douglas, Lancaster and Hall — pay more than half of Nebraska's personal state income tax. . . . Hunting Guidelines To Be Set

Recommendations of game biologists on the 1971 deer, antelope, cottontail, and squirrel seasons and testimony from the public will be given at a public hearing of the Game and Parks Commission on Friday at the State Capitol in Lincoln.

Following the 9 a.m. hearing, the commissioners will set regulations for the four seasons. Opening dates were set at the February commission meeting.

Factors to be decided include closing dates, the deer and antelope units to be open, the number of permits in each unit and the ratio of any-deer permits, shooting hours, and the bag and possession limits for squirrel and cottontails.

Applications for deer and antelope permits will be accepted from residents during an initial application period running from June 15 through 30. All applications received during this time will be eligible for drawings for permits in oversubscribed units.

The rest of Nebraska's major hunting seasons will be set at the August meeting. Waterfowl regulations will be established after the framework is prepared by federal biologists and announced by the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service. Pheasant, quail, and grouse regulations will be established after Game Commission surveys indicate the success of this year's nesting season.

Camping Is 'Big Business'

More Travel, Recreation, Vacation . . . Pages 7B-10B

New York (UPI) — "Getting away from it all" through camping has become big business.

Forty million Americans will spend $2 billion this year to outfit themselves for ventures into the great outdoors in the hope of escaping city tensions and pollution. Those figures are expected to double by 1975. Camping seems to be in the boom stage, according to recent statistics released by the U.S. Department of Interior's Bureau for Outdoor Recreation.

It sees a 283 percent increase in overall camping activity by the turn of the century.

This flight to the mountains and valleys has been accompanied by rapid growth in the number and sales of firms specializing in camping equipment. Major firms in the field include the Coleman Company, Wichita, Kansas; King-Seeley (Thermos Division), Norwich, Conn.; Evinrude Motors, a division of Outboard Marine Corp., Milwaukee, Wisc.; Bernz-O-Matic Corp. New York; The Zeebo and Kieckhafer divisions of Brunswick Corp.; the Apache Division of the Vesely Co., Lapeer, Mich.; and, of course, the auto manufacturers.

Sheldon Coleman, chairman and president of the Coleman company, largest producer of camping equipment, says the shorter work week and development of comfort and convenience equipment have fed the growth of camping.

Even though Americans like the idea of escaping their crowded cities, they still prefer some comforts when they "rough it." Companies have been quick to oblige.

It's now possible to curl up at night in a comfortable sleeping bag or tent and read fine print in a book by the light of a portable lantern, or stay warm and dry with a portable tent heater. If the fishing and hunting are bad, one can dine well on freeze-dried foods which can be prepared quickly in coated, no-work utensils over efficient fold-away camp stoves.

Coleman makes feather-weight, waterproof tents with sewn-in floors and bug-proof windows. Some even can be rigged without ropes or stakes. And for those campers who want to know in advance where their next bed will be, there's a fold-up tent trailer which makes it possible to sleep just about anywhere.

Such innovations not only coax more people into the woods, they also extend the length of the camping season. The development of snowmobiles, for instance, has opened up new terrain previously inaccessible for winter camping.

Twenty years ago campers usually fell into two categories — the rich who fancied such a life and could afford expensive equipment and the low income, blue collar worker who camped because it provided an inexpensive family vacation.

Today the camper cuts through every social and economic level. And because mass production now is necessary to supply camping needs, the unit cost has been cut.

Lincoln Offers Much to Tourists

By RANDY YORK

Want to take that big vacation at little, if any, cost?

Then why not spend it in Lincoln?

Nebraska's Capital City offers not only maximized convenience to Lincolinites and even residents, but also an ideal tourist setting with a number of things to do and places to go.

Whether you have a week or a weekend, Lincoln could be the best and least costly place to spend it.

For openers, you can visit the Nebraska State Historical Society, the University of Nebraska State Museum, two multi-million dollar art galleries or the Nebraska State Capitol building, reputedly one of the ten architectural wonders of the world.

Lincoln's tourist attractions can give you more than a new historical perspective, however. Whether you want to be entertained or entertain yourself, the Capital City has the facilities in which to do it.

Entertainment programs include the Lincoln Symphony

Orchestra, the Broadway Theatre League, Community Playhouse and the University of Nebraska and Nebraska Wesleyan University drama departments.

Lincoln also has 46 parks which cover more than 4,200 acres of land. The facilities include numerous playgrounds, picnic areas, shelter houses, baseball and softball diamonds, tennis courts, dance pavilions, skating areas and horseback riding areas.

Among Lincoln's natural settings are Pioneer's Park, Antelope Park and Children's Zoo, which ranks as one of the most outstanding zoos of its kind in the country.

Children's Zoo, which opened in the summer of 1965, offers a place where children and animals may mingle. A kiddie-sized train and an old-fashioned town also are featured.

For the sports-minded, Lincoln has three public owned golf courses and six conveniently located public swimming pools.

If you're a summer tourist and enjoy horse racing, Lincoln would be an ideal place to be from July 7 to Aug. 7. Twenty-five racing days have been scheduled for the Fairgrounds.

The beautifully landscaped Sunken Gardens also should be included among a tourist's stop as well as the Governor's Mansion, the Ralph Mueller Planetarium, Thomas P. Kennard Home, the Old Pawnee Indian Council Cave and Chet Ager Nature Center at Pioneer's Park.

There are a lot of good reasons to take a vacation in Lincoln. A smart tourist should take advantage of them.

What To See, Where To Go in Lincoln

Sailors Discover New Home

By DICK HAWS
Some 12 years ago, from out of the dry, southwestern corner of Kansas came Leon Satterfield, along with his family, to take up residence as a teacher of English at Nebraska Wesleyan University.

At that time, Lincoln provided scant boating opportunities — much like Satterfield's hometown of Plaines, Kan.

All of that, however, was soon to change — as was Satterfield.

The reason? The development in the early 1960s of the Salt Valley watershed by the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers, and the subsequent building of ten major reservoirs on which the residents of Lancaster County, including Satterfield, could do their boating.

Today, Satterfield owns two sailboats — one 13-foot L.S. 13, and a Sailfish. During the summer, he like to sail several times per week.

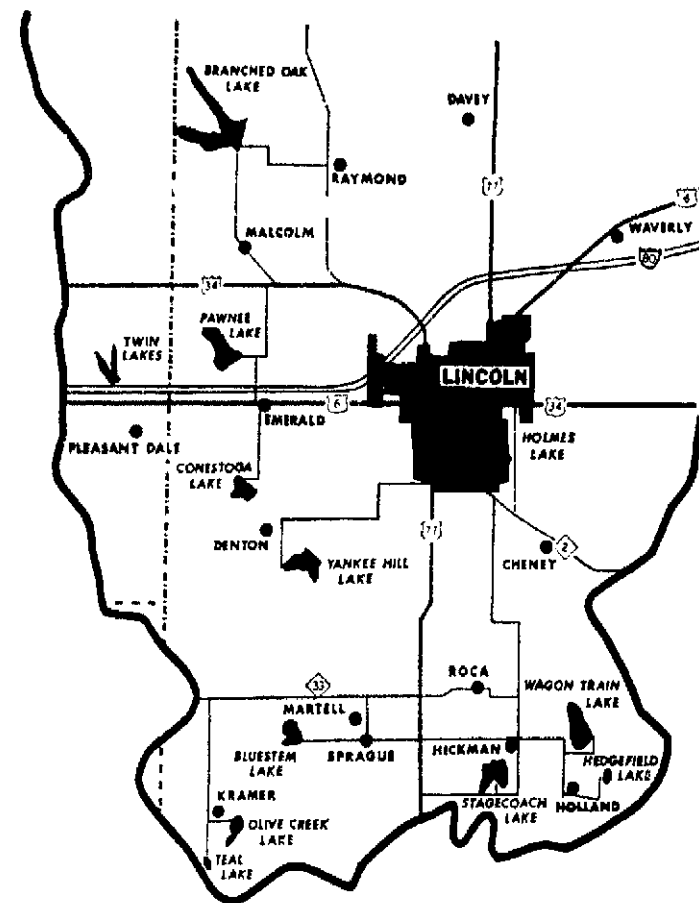

Another avid sailor, Jack Wagener, estimates that there are some 40 snipe sailboats in the Lincoln area, as well as about 100 of the smaller boardboats — Sunfish and Sailfish.

As an example of the degree to which sailing has developed in Lancaster County, Wagener mentioned that the Lincoln Sail Club has leased a site on Branched Oak Lake near Raymond for the establishment of a permanent sail club, complete with mooring facilities for club members.

Every Sunday afternoon, the local Snipe fleet takes to the waters — this year at Branched Oak — for their weekly races — a contest which prompted Wagener to remark that sailing is one of the most competitive sports there is.

But while there has been a dramatic increase in the number of Lancaster County residents who sail, there has been an even greater increase in those who own and use motor boats.

According to the State Game and Parks Commission, in 1962, prior to the opening of the first reservoir, some 1,363 motor boats were registered in Lancaster County.

Salt Valley lakes offer lots of fun.

By 1970, that number had increased at the rate of about 230 per year to last year's figure of 3,409.

But even more significant has been the great numbers of people who make use of the reservoirs.

Jack Strain of the Game and Parks Commission said that in 1964, some 300,000 visits were counted to the two Salt Valley reservoirs then open.

By 1970, with all nine lakes open, the commission reported some 1,437,000 visits to the lakes — almost equal to the entire population of Nebraska.

The tenth lake, Holmes, is administered by the city of Lincoln.

On a good Sunday, Strain said, there will be cars from as many as 20 Nebraska counties as well as six states found at the Salt Valley sites.

Strain explained that aside from the availability of water, surely another factor which has contributed to the boating boom in Lancaster County has simply been economics.

"Since WWII," Strain said, "the more economical fabrication of boats and motors has put them within the reach of most people."

Today, a buyer can find in Lincoln new fishing boats for as little as $100, while small fishing boat motors can start as low as $150.

Sailboats — the board variety — usually begin around $400, while the stout-hearted can purchase sailboat kits and build their own, thereby reducing costs by up to 50%.

But what Satterfield believes more than anything else has contributed to the increase in boating has simply been what he calls the "archtypal urge of all man to get back to the water and unfurl the old canvas."

High School Archer Sets Sights on Olympics

By D. BYRON YAKE
ERIE, Pa. (AP) — Meet John Williams, 17, a high school senior A straightshooting archer. Goal: the 1972 Olympics.

The Olympics, to be held in Munich, Germany, has never included archery. Williams won't go so far as to say he might be a gold medal winner, but... "Let's take one step at a time," he said this week.

Williams will get a taste of international archery competition this month when he joins a four-member U.S. archery team invited to Moscow May 27-30 for the Soviet Archery Federation Championship.

Williams, admitting he won't get much chance to see the Soviet Union while he is there, says competing in Russia sounds exciting but "it's just another tournament."

According to Marvin Kleinman of Cincinnati, Ohio, president of the U.S. Archery Association, this is the first time an archery team has been invited to go behind the Iron Curtain.

Tournament archery for Williams began at age 10. When he was 11, he finished second in a state tournament. At 13 he had all the junior state and national tournament championships and a six-point bow he shot with a bow and arrow.

"He hasn't gotten one since," said Williams' mother, Marilyn. Two years ago, Williams lost the world championship in the men's division by just three points to current world champion Hardy Ward of Point Pleasant, Tex. Ward and two women, Mrs. Nancy Myrce of Oakland Park, Fla. and Doreen Wilbur of Jefferson, Ohio also are participating in the Russian contests.

For two hours a day during the summer, Williams and his parents, also archers, practice on their home-made target range.

"We shoot from one neighbor's back yard across our yard and into another neighbor's yard," Williams said. "It just makes 90 meters."

Ninety meters is 100 yards—the length of a football field—and in the Russian tournament, archers will be shooting what are called fita rounds. There will be two rounds.

Each archer will shoot 36 arrows at 90 meters, 36 at 70 meters, 36 at 50 meters and 36 at 30 meters.

Usually, there are three persons to a target in competition, one at the line at a time. Each person takes turns shooting three arrows at the target. A "bull's eye" is worth 10 points.

If he desired, John could turn professional. Winners earn as much as $500 to $1,000 in the larger pro shoots. But he wants to remain an amateur to compete in the Olympics.

Williams also prefers crowds to the loneliness of shooting by himself.

"Crowds seem to stimulate you," he said. "But weather is the most important factor in

Sunlight Bothers Fish Too

Sun glasses may bring comfort to fishermen on bright days, but what can fish do about brilliant light? Unlike mammals and birds, fish lack eyelids to close, and they certainly don't have sun glasses. Nor can they contract or expand the irises of their eyes to compensate for light conditions.

The fact that fish usually prefer shade is an indication that direct sunlight bothers them. This helps explain why during summer, when the sun's rays strike water at a more direct angle, the best fishing usually occurs in early morning, late evening, or at night.

Studies indicate there is a relationship between the amount of sunlight penetrating the water and the way fish behave. By understanding how fish react to sunlight, anglers can change their methods to suit conditions and have more success.

Early in the year fish seek shade under docks, bridges, overhanging banks, around large rocks and in similar places, all generally in shallow water. As a lake's water warms fish will move deeper where sunlight is diffused. How far down depends in part upon oxygen content. Remember that bass school in deep holes during the hottest part of day in summer.

Backpacking Catching On

Americans are rediscovering their feet. More and more families are abandoning the luxuries of civilization and substituting legs for wheels, muscles for motors and pine needles for spring mattresses.

Ten years ago, only one-tenth of the population had hiked into America's wilderness to experience camping. By 1969, more than one out of three Americans had pitched a tent in a campground or backwoods area. Today, walking has become a sport, with family backpacking leading the way in the escape from ringing telephones and automobile exhaust.

If you're ready to try it with your family, here are some tips on your most important piece of equipment: the backpack.

Generally, packs can be broken down into three categories, each serving a particular need.

The frameless pack or knapsack is little more than a rectangular canvas bag fitted with shoulder straps. Several companies make a small pack designed to carry the essentials of day hiking (lunch, a sweater for the late afternoon, a camera and a few emergency supplies). These bags are lightweight, inexpensive and carries 5 to 10 pounds. For longer hikes, you can extend load capacity by adding a triangular frame which will lift the daybag upright and away from the back for easier carry. On a family hike, the day bag is just right for younger children who want to carry their share.

If you are planning an overnight or weekend trip, you'll want a rigid frame pack whose essential task is to evenly distribute the weight of the pack so you'll be comfortable on the trail.

A long contoured frame with a waist strap accomplishes this by placing the weight high and toward the center of gravity more in line with your hips, where you can most comfortably handle it. Since overnight models are medium-sized in capacity, they also make good long trip packs for wives and teen-age children.

Hikers who are setting out for an extended trip — a week or more into back country — would do best to choose a pack design that is geared for rugged wear, with more inches of room and special long-hike comfort features.

Backpacks are sold in general sporting goods stores, mountaineering shops and in most discount and department stores across the country in a variety of styles and sizes. A salesman can help you find the best bag for your needs, but here are some features to look for on any pack.

The Bag:

1. Get a coated, nylon bag in preference to plain old canvas duck. It's brighter, more visual and waterproof.

2. Check for a double layer nylon bottom and double-stitched nylon seams which insure longer wear.

3. Look for nylon zippers, covered by flaps. They're lighter, and operate better in cold weather.

4. Select a bag with padded shoulder straps and a hip carry belt for more comfortable hiking.

The Frame:

1. Buy a bag with a lightweight aluminum frame that is non-welded. A solid-weld frame fatigues and cracks under the pounding of the trail.

2. Buy bag and frame together, not as separate items. You want the bag to ride with perfect fit.

No Limits
The number of archery permits for deer and antelope in Nebraska is unlimited, and the entire state is open to bow hunting in season.

Only Fair

During Nebraska's 1969 firearm-deer hunt, more than 46 percent of the hunters in the Upper Platte Unit bagged a deer.

Nebraska offers much to local anglers. For trout, the Pine Ridge country of the northwest, or selected Sandhills streams are top choices. For nearly everything, pick Lake McConaughy in the far west. For bass and walleyes, try the Interstate chain of lakes or Harlan County Reservoir, or even big Lewis and Clark Lake in the northeast. And don't forget the Salt Valley lakes in Lancaster County.

Nebraska Anglers Should Stay Home

By RANDY EICKHOFF

Anglers everywhere impatiently wait for that summer vacation every year when they can throw a packed suitcase and assorted tackle into a car and head towards their favorite fishing camp.

Unfortunately, a lot of Nebraskans tend to visit Minnesota or Canada for their fishing hotspot when they could shorten the expense and travel time by sticking closer to home.

Nebraska offers practically every kind of fresh-water fishing there is from trout to catfish or whatever species the angler has in mind.

If trout (rainbow, speckled, brown) is foremost in your mind, then visit Soldier's Creek, or the White River in the Pine Ridge Country or that old standby, Lake McConaughy.

Other places in the state such as the Snake River and Merritt Reservoir near Valentine have also produced decent sized catches for the aspiring angler with probably the Snake River carrying a slight edge over the dam.

Les Kime of Valentine can provide the angler with practically any information about fishing that he could want and also has cabins practically within casting distance of the Snake River.

Anglers who prefer bass to trout have a little easier time of it as most lakes in state recreation areas are stocked with bass along with crappie and bluegill.

The various sandhill lakes around Theford and Valentine probably can provide the most diversified fishing around with two exceptions —Big Mac and Harlan County Reservoir.

Big Mac is undoubtedly the most versatile of all lakes, offering a wide variety of fish to choose from.

Current state records also show that Big Mac far outnumbers all other lakes in producing record catches of all species.

For example, the northern pike record, coho and kokanee salmon, crappie, and striped bass records all were at one time from McConaughy as were all the trout records.

It isn't unusual for an out-of-stater to make Nebraska the scene of his fishing trip and, in some instances, to walk away with a new Nebraska record.

Flooding Hampers Anglers

"High waters in the North Platte River have flooded the sandpits at Bridgeport State Recreation Area, and there is a fair chance that some of our other areas downstream may take water," according to Willard Barbee, director of the Game and Parks Commission.

The high water level is the result of melting snow in the mountain regions of the Platte drainage. Reservoirs upstream in Wyoming are full, and most of the heavy runoff is being passed through their spillways. At Lake McConaughy near Ogallala, some 3,600 cubic feet of water per second are being released into the river.

Besides temporarily hampering angling in the river itself, the crest of water moving down the Platte may also harm other fishing in the long run. Flood waters could bring rough fish into sandpits and Interstate 80 lakes that now harbor good populations of game fish.

Besides Interstate 80 lakes, other Game Commission areas that might eventually be threatened include Hord Lake, Fremont, Two Rivers, and Louisville state recreation areas and Plattsmouth Waterfowl Management Area.

Courtship

Sharp-tailed grouse and prairie chickens perform their courtship rituals on display grounds from late March to early May.

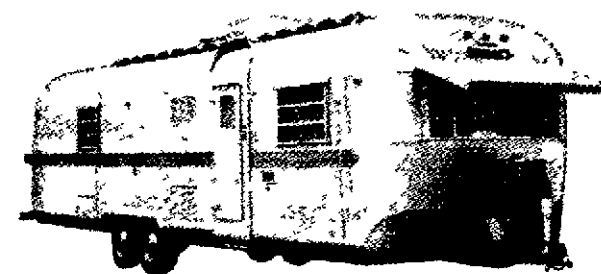

Small Chance

A young cottontail has only one chance in 20 to reach its first birthday.

State Record

Calvin Thornton of Valentine holds Nebraska's state hook-and-line record for Sacramento perch with a 1-pound, 13-ounce fish taken from Clear Lake on the Valentine National Wildlife Refuge on Feb. 25, 1968.

Motorists Beware Of Travel Woes

By TONY WEITZEL
Chicago Daily News Service

Permit me to pen a lugubrious warning to such of you as intend shortly to embark upon the open road in the family jalopy. To wit: Take along A. A moderately inclusive kit of spare parts, meaning such things as spark plugs, fan belts, distributor points; and B. A rudimentary knowledge of what to do with them, even if it means buying one of those things they call a factory manual.

I bring up this unhappy subject because I am unhappy. And I am unhappy because I fell among gas station attendants on a recent jaunt to Florida.

Usually, I zip on down the Interstate-cum-detours with little trauma. But this time I had a new vehicle. It was a brand new, orange-hued truck with power steering, automatic transmission, power brakes and a motor capable of sending it almost into orbit. And, oh yes, air conditioning.

I broke it in carefully. And before I left for the South I ran it into the car agency and had the mechanics check everything over. They even put it on that electronic track that analyzes your car's very soul. The mechanics said it was perfect.

It was, too, until I got into Indiana and looked at my speedometer. I was following a Volkswagen and my speedometer read 90 miles an hour. It was an old Volkswagen, too.

So I check the speedo at one of those road areas where they have measured miles marked off. Each measured mile registered 1.24 miles on the dial. My speed was more than 20 per cent fast!

I was annoyed but I figured I could live with it until I got back to Chicago, using a bit of mathematical wizardry.

But all went well until the orange truck and I were delving deep into Georgia on I-75, freed at last from the Indiana detours and the Tennessee detours and even the last Georgia detour above Atlanta.

The sun was shining. Puffy clouds high overhead promised showers on the morrow. I speeded up just a mite to pass a house which was rumbling down the highway at 75 miles an hour. No, fellow traveler, I am not kidding. This was a house of the sort erroneously called a "mobile home" and it was being towed by a huge truck at 75, just behind another truck towing the other half of this house, also at 75. When, if ever, both halves arrived at their permanent site, they would be bolted together and form a dwelling 25 feet wide and 60 feet long, including porch.

Anyway, just as I passed this galloping gazebo something snapped under my truck's hood. Then something else snapped. I thought maybe the tires had picked up a couple of stones. Then the air conditioning ducts began spewing hot air. The needle on my temperature gauge swung into the red zone.

A sign at the roadside said, "exit—gas—food—lodging." I swung into the exit ramp and rolled up to a gas pump just as my radiator cap started honking like a trombone.

A lithe young gas station type pointed, "put it over there."

I let the truck roll over to the far end of the drive. Then I lifted the hood and ducked. The gas station chap chuckled.

"You just," he conformed, "busted two out of three fan belts."

"Have you," I demanded, "belts to replace 'em?"

"Let'er cool down," he urged, "and we'll fix everything."

I went inside and had a Coke. The gas lad was working on the truck now and also on his vocabulary, not necessarily in that order. I said I didn't think he ought to use a crowbar on the compressor. He cursed some more. I went inside and had a hamburger which tasted like old corncocks. Then I had coffee. Finally he came in and said the job was done and the bill was $24.60 including some stuff he put in the radiator to coddle the air conditioner.

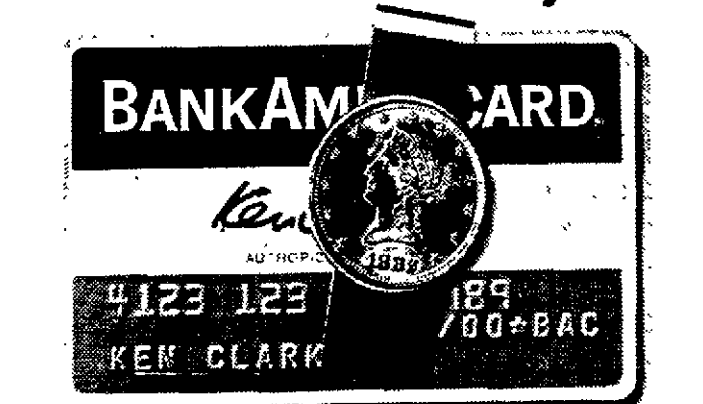

I thanked him and took off. I was four hours late. That's why I didn't drive back to complain about the air conditioner not working and the motor heating up. A mechanic in northern Florida told me why a couple hundred miles further on.

The belt to the air conditioning compressor was limp as a licorice shoelace. The fan belt wasn't much better.

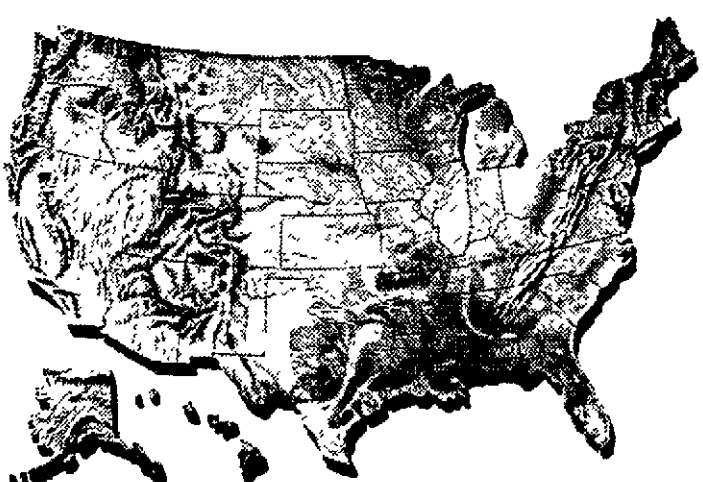

"Them belts," growled my friend the mechanic, "wasn't made for anything bigger'n a lawnmower!"

He put in another set of belts and he didn't use a crowbar on the compressor. And he only charged me $14.20. The belts are still in good shape apparently. But now, when I venture forth, I carry extra belts, extra plugs, extra points and a nasty suspicious nature. Go thou and do likewise.

Think of it as money.

Travel money.

With the constitutional deadline rapidly approaching for adjournment of the Legislature, I am wondering whether bills not processed by that date will automatically die.
—W. W., Lincoln.

ACTION LINE: No, says the legislative clerk's office.

Bills carried over to the 1972 Legislature will retain the status they held when the 1971 Legislature adjourned. Only those bills still in committee will die. A bill on general file, for example, will still be on general file when the 1972 session begins. The 1972 Legislature will first take up the leftover bills rather than the new bills which are certain to be introduced.

The Constitution limits the legislative session to 90 days this year and 60 days in 1972. However, 40 of the 49 lawmakers could vote an extension.

I'm getting very tired of competing with slow-moving bikes on arterial streets during the rush hour. Do bikes have a legal right to block a lane of traffic?
—Driver, Lincoln

ACTION LINE: No says Lincoln Police Capt. Bob Myers, and something will be done about it.

According to City Ordinance 10.64.120, bicyclists must ride as close to the curb as possible. An enforcement crackdown is coming for those who do not follow this ordinance, says Capt. Myers, as well as those who violate City Ordinance 10.64.130, which states that group riding is prohibited on public streets and that bicyclists must ride single file except in areas where they are allowed on paths or parts of the roadway set aside for the exclusive use of bikes.

With so many more bikes on the streets, Capt. Myers says danger to both the riders and motorists is being created because some riders do not follow the law. Also to be on the strict enforcement list now will be bike registration and the requirement that bikes ridden at night have lights and proper reflectors.

In August 1971 we purchased some land in Arkansas from Fairfield Bay Inc. At that time we were told we could resell the lot anytime just by letting the company know. We notified the company three months ago, but so far it has not sent the papers it promised for us to sign and its officials refuse to talk about the matter on the phone. Help!
—Mrs. Gerald L. House, Lincoln.

ACTION LINE: The company's sales manager, Robert Thompson, told ACTION LINE he is sorry his efforts to reach you by phone have been unsuccessful. He will write, explaining, as he did to ACTION LINE, that the fine does act as a brokerage for resales and that it will be necessary for you either to appear in the office personally and list your property for sale or do so by letter with notarized signatures to make the listing official.

The Little Rock Better Business Bureau reports numerous inquiries about the company, but no official complaints. The bureau advises that if promises made during the sales talk are not embodied in the original sales contract, little can be done.

Some very nice neighbors are worried about two large trees on the property next to them. If these trees should fall during a storm, they might cause much damage to the home. However, the trees are on a piece of property that is up for sale and is involved in a legal hassle. What can our neighbors do?
—B.M.C., Lincoln

ACTION LINE: The City Legal Dept. advises that unless a public nuisance is involved, the city cannot intervene in a dispute between private property owners.
Best bet is to consult an attorney.

Details of $400,000 Transaction Contained in Federal Grant Application City Expects To Pay $53,300 for Firm's 36 Buses

By SCOTT HOOBER

Of the roughly $400,000 the city expects to spend to buy Lincoln City Lines, $53,300 will go to buy the firm's 36 buses.

These details were contained in Lincoln's preliminary application for a federal capital grant, filed with the Urban Mass Transportation Administration (UMTA) of the federal Department of Transportation two months ago and recently made public.

Although city officials have repeatedly insisted they would bargain for a good price from Lincoln City Lines, no details were previously available. For example, it has been said that some of the buses — ranging in age up to 22 years — will be bought for salvage value, then sold for the same amount when new coaches arrive.

According to the grant application, the oldest buses, 14 36-passenger models dating back to 1949, have been appraised at $500 each. The three 1951s, all 45-passenger models, fare only slightly better at $600 each.

Top price is for the newest buses — four 35-passenger 1967 models. They are valued at $5,500 each, and UMTA now is urging the city to keep and renovate them.

By contrast, a new 45-passenger bus runs $35,000, with a 33-passenger coach — which UMTA now favors for Lincoln — running $26,000-$29,000.

All told, the city has budgeted $53,300 to buy all 36 of Lincoln City Lines' buses. The preliminary grant estimates if all are sold, they will bring about $50,000, which means in effect the city will be renting the old equipment for $3,000-plus for about six months.

The rest of the $400,000 will buy all the rest of the private firm's property, equipment and supplies, although it is not broken down further in the grant application. Earlier, however, City Atty. Richard Wood said the city likely will pay somewhat less than the $170,000 appraised value for the company's land and building at 710 J St.

Lincoln also plans to buy equipment to wash the buses inside and out, new service cars and trucks, $25,000 in new shop equipment and the existing four Mini-Buses (for which no appraisal has yet been made and negotiations not begun, according to Wood).

The breakdown:
Acquisition of City Lines $	400,000
39 new 45-passenger buses @ $25,000	1,365,000
Bus stop signs	6,000
Bus washer and Cyclone cleaner	52,000
Two-way radio system	26,000
New shop equipment	25,000
New service cars and trucks	15,000
Garage renovation	50,000
Purchase of four Mini-Buses	40,000
	1,979,000
5% contingency	98,950
Estimated total cost	$2,077,950

Hopefully, the city will qualify for a two-thirds grant totaling $1,351,967. (That figure is actually two-thirds of $2,027,950, a total apparently arrived at since the preliminary application was compiled.) If Lincoln does not meet certain regional planning requirements, it will only get half of the total from UMTA, although it has three years in which to qualify for the additional amount.

Author's Analysis

The preliminary application also is noteworthy in its pessimism at the city-owned bus line's profit potential.

It quotes figures from the report of Simpson & Curtin, the city's transit consultants, and concludes, "There is very little prospect for even a modest operating profit."

Simpson & Curtin projected a $38,000 profit the first year before consideration of depreciation and traffic promotion. But those two items come out to $36,970 and $15,000 respectively. And even without depreciation and promotion, the consultants projected losses of $12,000 and $40,000 the second and third years, with deficits in the range of $40,000-$50,000 after that.

"In addition," the application says, "the Mini-Line may produce an operating deficit of approximately $13,000 each year if the present level of fares and service is continued."

That pessimism is in sharp contrast to the stated belief of many city officials, and nongovernmental public transit backers, that riders can be lured back to the buses and a profit made.

'Parlor Game' Is Added to the Cornhusker, NU Yearbook

By GWEN NOBBE

University of Nebraska alumni can fondly remember the good old days when they pick up their NU yearbook, the Cornhusker, and play the "look at my picture" game.

Times have changed — and so has the Cornhusker.

When NU students pick up the 1971 edition of the yearbook there will be a number of games available, including: look at my picture, look at pictures of the campus, look at pictures of students in community work — and a real parlor-type game dubbed "The University Game."

The addition of a parlor game, however, is one of the more minor changes the traditional Cornhusker has seen this last year, according to yearbook editor Bill Ganzel of Lincoln.

"It's no secret that the yearbook has been in trouble for the past few years," Ganzel said, "and we feel it's because the students aren't interested in the traditional mug shot edition."

"Even though enrolment at NU doubled in the past 10 years, the number of yearbook sales has dropped to about half of what it was in the early sixties," Ganzel said.

Last year the Cornhusker experimented with a complete yearbook including stories and pictures on the campus' day-to-day scene.

"I think the students liked what they saw, even though our distribution was extremely limited," Ganzel said.

"This year we have expanded the two-section book to a nine-section edition covering both the traditional and contemporary yearbook scenes," Ganzel said.

The composite includes sections on: Greeks, dormitories, academics, activities, sports, an in-depth study of NU, a poetry anthology, activities, and a comic book.

"Our problem is that even though we have a good product, we haven't been able to inform the students or the alumni adequately of the product, and why they should buy it," Ganzel said.

"About 60% of the student body lives off campus. This presents a problem of informing them of what the yearbook has to offer," Ganzel said. "Those students come down here (to campus) for their classes and then they go home. There isn't any way we have been able to reach them effectively."

"We are enthusiastic about the yearbook, and we have had inquiries from other campuses throughout the nation about the new style. We know it's radical, but I think when the students get to know it, it will be a success," Ganzel said.

Unlike the NU newspaper, The Daily Nebraskan, the yearbook receives no financial support from tuition funds. It is supported entirely by revenue from page sales, and subscription revenues, according to Ganzel.

The $7.50, hard-bound Cornhusker is slated to go on sale in the Nebraska Student Union on the city campus Tuesday through May 28, according to Ganzel. The yearbook was put together by a staff of 50 NU students who are now playing the "I hope we have a record year of Cornhusker sales" game.

Cornhusker editor Bill Ganzel, and his assistant, Jody Beck, both of Lincoln, look over the 1971 University of Nebraska yearbook surrounded by the 2,500 copies packaged and ready to go on sale this week.

Nebraska Court of Industrial Relations Asked to Take 'Immediate' Action North Platte Tech School 'Fires' 5 Association Teachers

By DICK HERMAN

The Nebraska Court of Industrial Relations has been asked to "immediately" take action to prevent members of the Mid-Plains Education Assn. at North Platte from being put out of their vocational-technical college teaching jobs.

The association's application to the industrial court late last week for an order added a new dimension to the legal quarrel between the organization and the governing board of the technical school.

On April 24, the five-judge court listened to arguments initiated when the association filed suit against the college in January. At issue in that litigation is the governing board's refusal to negotiate with the association about terms and conditions of employment.

No court decision has been announced in that case.

But on May 5, according to the application for order filed last week by the association's attorney, Theodore L. Kessner, the college's board of governors terminated the employment of five college instructors. All are members of the association.

That action, Kessner charged, is "in direct violation of the laws of the State of Nebraska." It represents "a further action on the part of the defendant to deny the employees of said college their statutorily granted right to form, join and participate" in association actions, including collective bargaining.

The 1969 Legislature put on the books a public employees' unionization law. It allows school teachers to invoke the jurisdiction of the industrial relations court in disputes with boards of education.

Last week a legislative majority turned down Oakland Sen. C. W. Holmquist's attempt to sharply amend the 1969 statute. One provision of Holmquist's rejected LB176 was to prevent teachers from going to the industrial relations court.

Kessner's application alleges the governing board "has threatened and harassed" association members ever since January.

Sought by the association is an order protecting members "to the end that their employment status . . . not be altered or in any way changed while this action is pending." The request, too, seeks "to guarantee and protect the rights granted to the employees" under state law.

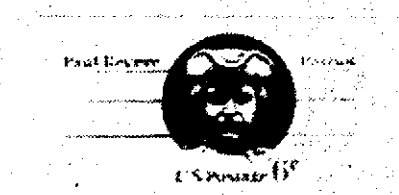

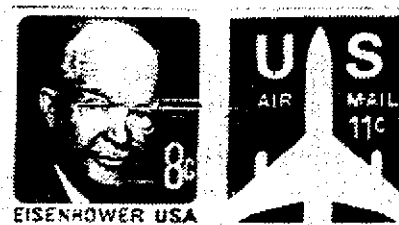

The case file at the Capitol shows the college's governing board has claimed the court does not have jurisdiction in the suit. A board answer contends the college teachers are not required to hold a valid Nebraska certificate "issued by the Commissioner of Education legalizing them to teach."

Attached to that answer was a sheet listing 32 names of persons asserted by the college to be teachers or instructors at the North Platte institution. Of the 32, the association reportedly had 11 members.

Listed as terminated May 5 by the association's application last week were Richard Hawley, Iona Hawley, Arnold Beyersdorf, Charles Suiter and Jean Dietrickson.

Stamps

The increase in postal rates — effective today — means new stamps will also be available. The cost of mailing a letter goes from 6 to 8c for first class and from 10 to 11c for airmail. For postcards, the cost of first class goes from 5 to 6c and to 9c for airmail. Lincolinites apparently did not jam postoffice boxes in an attempt to beat the rate increase, according to postoffice reports.

Nebraska No. 1 (Frog) Captures Jumping Contest

Angels Camp, Calif (UPI) — Nebraska captured the first-place honors Saturday in the annual Governor's Frog-Jumping Contest in this Mother Lode hamlet.

Nebraska No. 1 flew 10 feet 7 inches to gain the gold trophy. He was entered by former Lt. Gov. John Everroad.

Rampton's Romper of Utah placed second with a leap of 10 feet 4 inches.

The grand finale of the contest will be held Sunday. The short story "The Celebrated Jumping Frog of Calaveras County" by Mark Twain made the annual jump world famous. Each year entries from around the world try for the fame and fortune of the frog set.

Omaha — Mrs. Barbara Hawkins, 26, Bellevue, was killed Saturday in a one-car accident in Sarpy County.

Mrs. Joanne Boncorado, of Omaha was reported in serious condition at an Omaha Hospital.

The Sarpy County Sheriff's office said the two women were in a westbound car which apparently went out of control on Highway 370, struck the south shoulder of the highway and rolled over several times in the center of the road.

Mrs. Hawkins was thrown from the car.

Hyannis Girl, 17, Is Killed

Lakeside (UPI) — Lorie Applegarth, 17, Hyannis, was killed early Saturday when her car went out of control seven-tenths of a mile west of Lakeside on Neb. Hwy. 2.

Investigating officers said the car left the road and went into the right ditch, veered back across the highway, rolled over and landed on its wheels in the left ditch.

Two passengers, John Dierks, 21, of Lingie, Wyo., and Jo Ann Crouse, 17, of Ashby, were taken to an Alliance hospital by a rescue squad. Both suffered back and other injuries.

Starck Wins Foundation's Stuart Award

Robert D. Starck of Lincoln has been named winner of the 1971 Stuart Award by the Nebraska Human Resources Research Foundation by being selected the foundation's outstanding worker.

Starck, a junior majoring in art and education, is a foundation associate serving as chairman of the potential development project. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Alvin Starck, 1647 No. 28th.

could extend the session beyond the 90-day limit, such an extension has been regarded as unlikely unless a last minute emergency should develop.

Important judgments remain to be made.

The capital construction appropriations bill is scheduled to be considered Monday on general file, the first floor plateau where bills receive major debate.

Some of the more than 100 additional bills resting on general file will also be considered on Monday, which has been regarded as the last

Practice for Benefit Revue

The Chitty Chitty Bang Bang Girls are practicing for the KIDS CARE Benefit Revue at 7 p.m. next Sunday at Pershing Auditorium. The revue is sponsored by the Orthopedic Project Human Resources Research Foundation with all proceeds going to help the physically handicapped children in Lincoln and Nebraska. Some 50 parents and nearly 400 young people are working on the show.

Scout Project 3,000 to Collect Garbage

Some 3,000 Lincolinites are expected to participate June 5 in a massive coast-to-coast cleanup of garbage littering the nation. The program is sponsored by the Boy Scouts of America.

According to Scott Agnew, Scout executive of the Cornhusker Council, local workers, to include Boy Scouts, Girl Scouts and several other Lincoln groups, will plant trees and clean up institutional and residential areas.

Nationally, the Scouts' own brand of Earth Day, three years in planning, is designed to show Americans the volume of trash carelessly tossed on highways, streets, alleys, parks and vacant lots.

Plans call for the collected trash to be taken to central locations, such as supermarket parking lots. Where Ted Pettit, conservation director of the Boy Scouts said, "We're hoping the huge stacks will wake up the American public."

"Ninety-nine per cent of this is voluntary. The armed services have guaranteed help in the form of trucks and drivers. Industry will provide a large number of trucks. The teamsters have promised drivers," he said.

"We need all the adult volunteers we can get. Just tell them to call the local scout council office. Say I'd like to help — use my car to haul kids, use my truck to haul stuff..." Pettit added.

Some 10 million are expected to participate nationally.

Two additional cleanups will be held July 5 and Aug. 5 in Lincoln as a part of a continued national cleanup program.

Dinner Honors Dairy Science Prof Dr. Plum

A recognition dinner was held Saturday evening for University of Nebraska dairy science professor Dr. Mogens Plum.

A native of Denmark, Dr. Plum joined the University staff in 1949. He will retire July 1.

Dr. Plum has been noted for his research contributions to the dairy industry, especially in breeding methods for improving milk production.

Nebraskan Dies In Cycle Crash

By Associated Press
James Lloyd Congers, Superior, was killed when the motorcycle he was riding collided at the Lovewell Dam recreation in north central Kansas with another motorcycle.

The motorcycle was southbound on 37th St. when it was in collision with a car, northbound on 37th, that was turning west onto High St.

Susan D. Patocka, 16, 2625 Smith, a passenger on the motorcycle, was reported in critical condition, and cyclist Mark L. Kouma, 16, 4715 Pawnee, was still listed as serious.

The motorcycle was southbound on 37th St. when it was in collision with a car, northbound on 37th, that was turning west onto High St.

Some of the bills will be held over to the 1972 session, a practice allowed under the constitutional amendment adopted by voters last November which established annual sessions.

Scheduled Tuesday is a showdown on a motion to override Gov. J. James Exon's veto of LB573, the measure granting partial tax exemption to personal property of agriculture, business and industry.

Keeping senators further occupied during the session's closing days will be final reading on perhaps 120 or more bills. These are measures which have advanced from general file and are moving along the procedural road to final passage.

The constitutional requirement that bills be read aloud, word for word, before the final vote is taken, means that the legislature will need to devote many hours to final reading during the six remaining legislative days.

An unofficial count Saturday showed 126 bills on general file, of which 18 already have been ticketed for holding over to the 1972 session.

Another 124 bills have been advanced from general file and are moving towards final reading.

Bills passed thus far total 427.

For SE Nebraska Communities Environmental Service Program Is Offered

Crete — Citizens of 100 southeast Nebraska communities soon will have an opportunity to act on rising concern for the environment through a public service program conducted by Doane College with assistance from Vision 17.

A year-long program of environmental education, called "Quality of Life — Our Opportunities, Our Solutions," is built around three major symposia, will begin in September on Doane campus as part of the college's centennial observance.

Wilber Girl, 16, Winner of Essay Contest

Sandra Vesely, 16, Wilber, was named the first place winner of a statewide free enterprise essay contest held at Pershing Auditorium Saturday.

She won a $100 bond for her prize winning essay on free enterprise in America. Other winners were Lee Boening, 16, Blue Hill, second, $50. Miss Vesely, bond, and Jean Miller, 16, Oshkosh, third, $25 bond.

The youngsters were honored at the first Free Enterprise recognition meeting held in Lincoln Saturday under the auspices of Amway Corp. Distributors.

Joe Wilson, North Platte, spokesman for the organization, said over 2,200 Amway distributors from Nebraska, Kansas, South Dakota and Iowa attended the one-day meeting to hear a host of speakers all extolling the virtues of the American free enterprise system.

One of the speakers, University of Nebraska football coach Bob Devaney, told the delegates free enterprise is like football... those who are involved must go out to win.

New Faces On Council On Monday

Monday will see the last meeting of the old City Council and the first meeting of the new.

The afternoon will start with a 1:30 meeting of the old Council. After disposing of some business, the old Council will end forever — in formal terms, adjourn sine die.

Then the new City Council will be sworn in, along with Mayor Sam Schwartzkopf, followed by the election of new Council officers. Current speculation places two-year veteran Dick Hartsock in top contention for chairman, replacing Erv Peterson, who gave up his Council seat in an unsuccessful bid for mayor.

Also stepping down is the present vice chairman, Bill Davidson, along with Tom Ailman. The fourth incumbent whose seat was up for election was Helen Boosalis, who was reelected. The three new members will be Steve Cook, Bob Sikyta and Richard Baker.

According to the agenda, the new Council will conduct a public hearing of a non-controversial nature. The Downtown Lincoln Promotion Council will present some seedlings to the new Council for presentation to the Park Dept. for planting in some city park.

The agenda for the old City Council:

SECOND READING
Public Hearing
Two Ward Dist. — 16th, Prospect, 10, Sumner, and Franklin, 20 to 43rd. Also on third reading.

UNICEF Zoning — Amendment to align present ordinance to meet an exhibit referred to in the ordinance granting zone change. Also on first and third reading.

THIRD READING
Final Action
Street Vacation — Avery, 14th to vacant W. 2nd.

Flood Plain — Amending ordinance easing some restrictions on extension of utilities.

Political Signs — Amending provisions for temporary signs in front yards.

PETITIONS AND COMMUNICATIONS
Trend Homes of Nebraska Inc. — Request for time extension on sidewalk construction and bond in Wellington Greens.

Cleveland Narcisse — Manager application for Elks, IBPO of World No. 579, 229 So. 9th.

Philip G. Johnson & Co. — Proposed audit of Municipal Court books and records.

Election Commissioner — May general election results.

RESOLUTIONS
Volunteer Probation Counseling — Approve municipal Court application to Region II Crime Commission for federal funding.

Urban Mass Transportation — Ratify agreement.

Class C Liquor License — Application of Rudolph Conrad Suhr, 305 So. 13th.

Change Name — From John Moritz to Commodore Properties Inc in special permit application.

City Fishing Regulations — For every lake or body of water in any city-owned or controlled park.

PENDING
Alley Vacation — East-west, 26th to 27th, O to N.

Sewer Dist. — South of Pioneers, 61st to 70th.

Annexation — Vicinity 70th and Pioneers.

Ted Reeder Construction Co. — Mobile home permit, Salt Valley View.

F. Pace Woods — Amend community unit plan, Salt Valley View.

Duane Larson — Change in community unit plan, 70th and Old Post Road to permit 14 more units.

The agenda for the new City Council:

FIRST READING
Public Hearing May 24
Lincoln Electric System — Approve leases, 512 So. 7th, and northeast corner 9th and K.

Emerald Zoning Classifications — Planning Dept. request for classifications since the unincorporated village is now within the three-mile zoning jurisdiction following annexation of Arnold Heights.

Ray Watts — Change of zone from A-2 to D Multiple on three lots on No 68th north of Francis.

Prairie Heirlooms — Change of zone from D Multiple to G Local on southwest corner 28th and P. Planning Director asks change to K Light, not G Local.

Duane Larson — Change of zone from A-1 to A-2, east of 70th, south of Wellington Greens.

Gerald B. Lewis — Change of zone from AA Rural to H-2 Highway Commercial, SW 40th and West O.

Geneva North Grad Feted for Scholarship

Geneva — The first annual Juvenile Judges Assn. scholarship has been awarded to pretty Sharon Kay Dimitroff, 17, of Sarpy County.

Miss Dimitroff, one of ten girls to graduate from Geneva North High School Saturday, will use the $100 award to study cosmetology.

A similar scholarship will be given Friday at Kearney West High — the Boys Training School — at graduation exercises there.

With "In Ourselves the Futures Lies," as their class motto, the graduating class of the Geneva Training School high school was one of the largest in its history, Supt. Donald F. Best said.

Fourteen youngsters were also promoted from eighth grade at the Saturday morning excises — a third of them boys.

Addressing the students, parents and guests was Sen. Fern Hubbard Orme of Lincoln.

"Congratulations," she told the graduates, most of whom had had to triumph over obstacles to achieve their diplomas. "You have accomplished something important... now go on and accomplish something more!"

Some of the girls plan to go on to school and some have work plans, she added, including one who will go to work for a judge.

State Agencies Exon 'Will Not Make Charges'

Machinery Servicing

With passage of a new appropriation law for state government, Gov. J. J. Exon says his business equipment firm will cease making any charges for servicing office machinery in state agencies.

Since Exon's election last November the governor's firm has not tendered bids for sale of equipment to state government. Prior to that Exon's Inc. was a well-known and active competitor for state business.

Although Exon's Inc. last year dropped out of the bidding field the company continued to perform on service contracts for equipment previously sold the state.

Nebraska's Constitution includes this provision relating to conflict-of-interest situations:

"No... state officer (shall) be interested, either directly or indirectly, in an contract with the state or any county or municipality thereof, authorized by any law enacted during the term for which he shall be elected or appointed, or within one year after the expiration of such term."

Not until the 1971 Legislature enacted a new appropriation law was Exon's Inc. constitutionally barred from either bidding for new state business or being paid for serving established contracts.

Friday senators gave 42-0 approval to LB1025, the main state agency appropriation law for 1971-72.

In connection with that bill's adoption Exon was asked whether his Lincoln-based firm would continue to provide services and whether it would still sell equipment to local political subdivisions getting state money because of appropriation laws.

"As to the question 'Will Exon's Inc. continue in carrying out any equipment service contracts with state government?' the answer is no," the chief executive said.

"I have requested the president of Exon's Inc. to discontinue any charges for service to state government, the University system and the state colleges. We will perform services under service agreement that were contracted for prior to my assuming office."

The governor noted he has sought advice and guidance from Atty. Gen. Clarence Meyer "if there were any other areas where Exon's Inc. would be in violation of statutes, either legally or ethically" by continuing to bid for public agency business.

Exon reported he obtained a private legal opinion relating to his business connection, his public office, the constitutional language and Exon's Inc. continuing to sell goods and services to public agencies other than the state.

That opinion, according to the governor, said in part:

"In the case of other agencies and subdivisions including school districts, municipalities, improvement districts, public corporations, power districts and similar organizations, the governor has no actual authority or control and therefore is not in a disqualifying position."

"As to all such agencies, no disqualification would be imposed merely because some funds filtered down to such agencies through a state appropriation enacted during the term of the office of the governor."

Exon said Meyer has concurred with that view.

March 1, the governor said, he received a letter from the attorney general asserting "a very thorough study has been made of these problems and we agree with the conclusions expressed in the memorandum and in your letter."

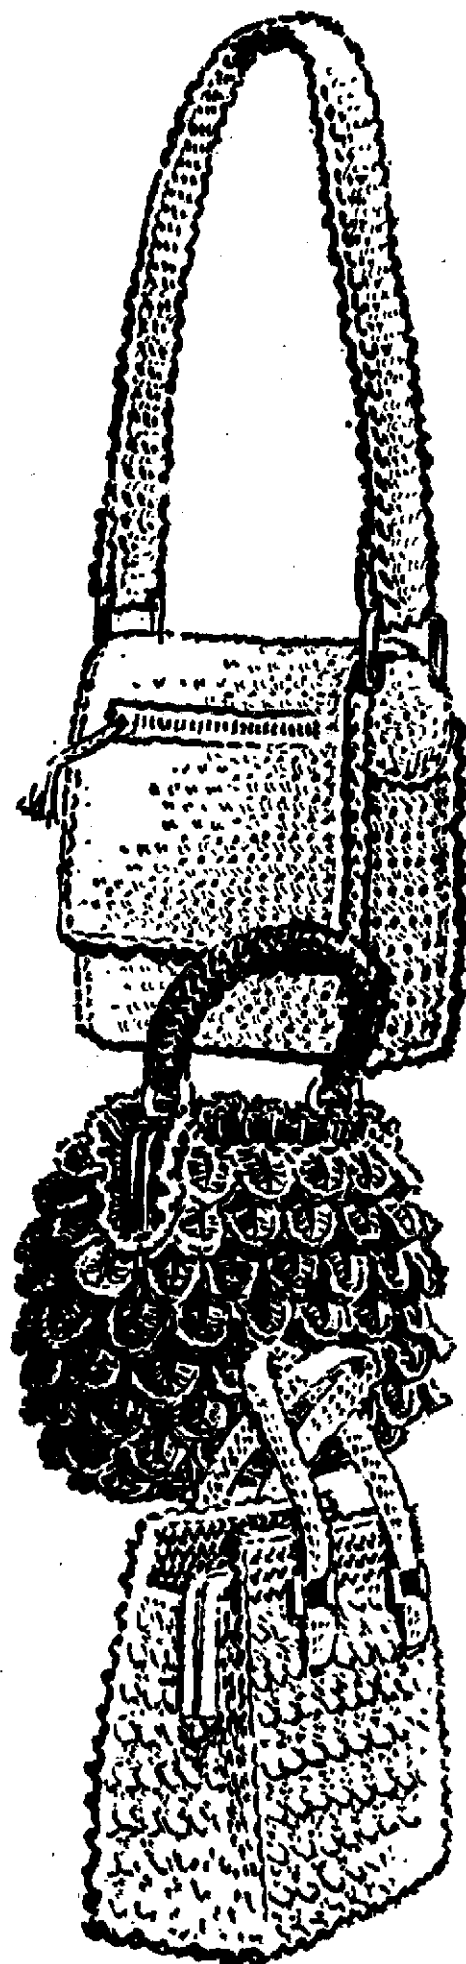

Don't miss it. News of friends on vacation, marriages, engagements, parties, P.T.A. notes and club meetings makes good reading in the family section of "Sunday Journal and Star."

Budget Remedy Difficult

By ROGER HIRSCH

Author's analysis

An immediate budget problem faced by Lancaster County may be a function of a long-range budget deficiency, which is easy to spot but difficult to remedy.

The County Board must come up with an additional $125,000 for its medical fund, which County Welfare Director J. Earle Trabert reported "clear out" Tuesday. Trabert said as he plans his budgets each year, he bases his requests on the previous year's increases. This year the medical fund exceeded one-year projections a great deal, he said, leading to the $125,000 deficiency.

Most likely source of the funds is the Lancaster Manor Fund which has a balance of $324,266. Trabert reports to transfer funds out of that fund into the medical fund will require the commissioners to pass a resolution declaring an "emergency" and hold a public hearing.

Trabert noted this procedure would not be necessary if the Lancaster Manor Fund were included with other funds within his budget, rather than as a separate county fund. Then, said Trabert, he could transfer from one fund to another with more ease.

However, could the whole problem of this insufficient budget amount have been solved if the county also had a six-year program or performance budget in addition to the more familiar one-year budget?

State law currently requires the county engineer to develop both six-year and one-year budgets as a method to plan quire the commissioners to pass a resolution declaring an "emergency" and hold a public hearing.

In a recent bulletin from the Governmental Research Institute (GRI), the Lancaster County budgetary process was termed "piecemeal", and was characterized as a "line item budget" in which the "major concern is in the objects of expenditure such as salaries and supplies."

GRI contrasted the budget method with a "program or performance budget" where the "major concern is with activities government performs, and with examining the effectiveness and costs of alternative ways to achieve programs or goals." GRI reasoned such budgeting was "closely related to planning" and predicted "simple techniques and structural arrangements will no longer suffice."

County officials don't agree.

They suggest even with a six-year program or performance budget, it would still be virtually impossible to predict when a particular fund would be insufficient to meet yearly needs, and it would be difficult to stick to the long-range budget in the medical costs field.

Arnold Ruhnke, executive director of the County Officials Assn., noted what the county did in welfare medical costs, was closely tied to state plans and regulations, which in turn were tied to federal regulations. "How could you plan if you could not estimate the caseload or what might happen to federal regulations?"

With "so many factors," Trabert and Ruhnke agreed, it would be "difficult to plan" ahead of time in the medical costs field.

Building Notes

Following two years of official existence, many of the County City Building's walls will be repainted, hopefully with a washable paint, according to building superintendent Henry Lorenz.

The walls in most have an unwashable type of paint, according to Lorenz, and since the color throughout the building is an off-white, every mark can be permanently viewed by visitors.

We Feel It Is Our Business to Educate and Not Legislate Style

By BOB NELSON

The experience of Lincoln public schools, which went this year from formal dress regulations to "guidelines," reflects what is happening across the country — a dress code — dress code — Lincoln school officials report virtually no problems during the current school year.

The Associated Press, after a nationwide sampling, says "school officials have just about given up trying to enforce rigid dress codes. Even hot pants draw little more than a raised eyebrow in most places these days."

A school spokesman at NNU first tried this approach in 1967 and repeated it in 1969. Prof. Leonard J. Kramer directed the seminar with counsel from Sen. Richard Marvel, sometimes faculty member at NNU.

Participating students were Dick Fontane, Bruce Erikson, Craig Gavin, David Stevens, Paul Snyder, George Kalogeras, John Gass, Richard Gardner, Robert Becciam and Deborah Thayer.

Senators cooperating were Roland Lucette, C. W. Holmquist, William Swanson, Wayne Ziebarth, Fern Orme, Fred Christen, Richard Probst, J. W. Robert Clark.

"These ventures turned out to be more valuable as educational experiences than any of us dared to hope for," said Kramer.

Calendar 'Gone'

Nebraska is leading the calendar revolution, Doane College Registrar Loyd C. Olson told a recent meeting of the American Association of College Registrars and Admissions Officers.

Beginning next fall two states — Nebraska and Alaska — will have no institutions of higher education using the traditional calendar, Olson said. Instead, colleges and universities will be on an early schedule, with the first semester starting in August or early September and ending before Christmas. This eliminates the "name duck" session, a brief resumption of the first semester after the holidays.

Oleason surveyed 2,376 in a calendar revolution taking place in the last three years and found that there is, indeed, traditional schedule.

Of Schools And Scholars

Seminar Ended

The end of the academic year and the end (almost) of the legislative session has meant, naturally, an end to one of Nebraska's most successful programs — "The Research Seminar in Modern Government."

"Ten political science students worked with a like number of state senators in a kind of intern relationship, gaining practical learning to supplement their theoretical study of government."

Senators cooperating were Roland Lucette, C. W. Holmquist, William Swanson, Wayne Ziebarth, Fern Orme, Fred Christen, Richard Probst, J. W. Robert Clark.

These ventures turned out to be more valuable as educational experiences than any of us dared to hope for," said Kramer.

Everybody in or in any way connected with the Legislature being human, everybody is thus bound to have bad days. Even members of that fallible little group known as the Capitol Press Corps. Consider the adventures of one of the brethren last week.

Seeking to arise from his seat facing the Unicameral membership, our boy backs into an electric fan. The whang-whang-whang of his coat in the blades not only shuts off the supply of gentle breezes but sends up a noise so great the Legislature is startled into silence. Moving hastily to rescue coat, news man bumps into the American flag. Downward falls Old Glory, Mt. Suribachi in reverse. Eager arms move to save the flag. Red-faced, our hero retreats.

The following day, Gov. J. J. Exon delivered his veto of the personal property tax exemption bill. Delivered is the precise word. The chief executive personally distributed copies of his message along Press Row. In comes the central figure of this episode. He looks at his desk. No veto letter. In a rising voice, he proclaims: "I'll bet that (large cuss word) didn't leave me one." Guess who was standing behind him? Right! Gov. Large Cuss Word. Next assignment, Soo Falls.

Sic Transit Constitution

Ever deeper into the executive branch of state government does the Legislature plunge. By law passed Friday, any federal funds not specifically appropriated by the 1971 Legislature but made available for state spending before July 1, 1972, must be cleared through the five-member Legislative Council Executive Board before the administrative branch can touch the cash.

And even greater and more direct involvement in executive affairs is contemplated in the bill (LB776) to promote use of a grain alcohol additive in gasoline. Under the measure as amendments were drawn, money for the program is to be appropriated straight to the Legislative Council. Then the council's executive board, obviously trying to give the governor a rest, would appoint a 10-member Agricultural Products Industrial Utilization Committee, five of whom must be state senators. The committee would administer the experimental program.

An Unintended Favor

Funny, isn't it, how things turn out. Recall the events of 1970 when J. J. Exon, then a member of Lincoln's O Street Gang (2300 block), was sending out public protests about overtaxation authorized by Gov. Norbert Tiemann. Cut taxes, demanded gubernatorial candidate Exon. Specifically, cut the state sales tax rate from 2½ to 2%.

Forced into a painful political crack, with Exon the winner any way Tiemann turned, the governor responded. The State Board of Equalization did lower state taxes for 1971. But instead of reducing the sales tax as Democrat Exon proposed, Republican Tiemann caused the personal income tax rate to drop, from 13% to 10%. Wrong, wrong, wrong, said Exon. You're giving tax relief to the rich, not the poor, he charged.

As it develops, Tiemann really did his critic a favor. The sales tax's 1970-71 revenue performance has been below par, while the income tax take continues to exceed official estimates. State Tax Commissioner William E. Peters reported last week. Instead of an ending fiscal-year balance in the general fund of around $42 million, a $36 million cushion is now being predicted by some at the Statehouse. It could have been worse.

In One Paragraph

—The pending increase in annual state aid to cities and counties (LB707) figures out to be a boost of almost exactly 30%.

—While Sen. Loran Schmit moved closer to Bellwood than David City early this year, he says he continues to claim David City as his official residence.

—Omaha Sen. David Stahmer reported a bill he was co-sponsoring with Sen. Fred Carstens of Beatrice was a perfect example of "urban-rural cooperation." The measure concerns the gift of dead bodies to the University Medical College. Which prompted Sen. Richard Marvel of Hastings to wonder which part of an anatomy is rural and which urban. That same day Stahmer failed to get an answer from Sen. Terry Carpenter about the contents of Carpenter's "mystery" bill being advanced — on faith — from general to select file. "I wouldn't give my mother a vote under these conditions," Stahmer declared.

—Lawmakers last week voted to give themselves, and Lt. Gov. Frank Marsh, each 2,000 8c stamps for use between adjournment and January, 1972.

—If things keep up, Lincoln Sen. Roland Luedtke says he may sponsor a constitutional amendment for a second legislative house — one to handle laws and one to process resolutions.

—Don't look now, but a number of last-minute bills being introduced in 1971 will be able to escape the scrutiny of a public hearing in the 1972 legislative session.

—Parochial school classes proportionately are more frequent visitors to the Legislature than are public school classes, veteran lawmakers agree. All are introduced by home-district senators.

In State High School Dropout Total 3.7%

One of every 27 Nebraska high school students who enrolled in the fall of 1969 dropped out before the school year ended last June, according to figures released by the State Education Dept.

Nebraska high school dropouts during 1969-70 totaled 3,574, or 3.7% of the total high school enrollment.

The statistics are contained in the annual report made by the State Board of Education to Gov. J. J. Exon.

The largest number, 1,102, dropped out of the 11th grade, figures showed. Dropouts in the other grades tallied 558 in 9th, 949 in 10th and 965 in 12th.

The dropout figure for all grades in Nebraska during the last school year was 4,580 plus an additional 430 from the previous summer.

Statistics showed the number of Nebraska pupils from 5 to 18 years of age decreased in 1970 by some 2,100 from the 1969 count.

There were 414,104 pupils in this age bracket counted in the 1970 census.

The total receipts to school districts last year from local sources, including local property taxes, were $165.7 million. County sources, including nonresident free high school tuition furnished $10.7 million, state sources $44.3 million, and federal funds $14 million.

Total district expense last year amounted to $213.2 million, a 5.5% increase over the previous year.

Of the total expense, cost of instruction, which includes teacher's salaries, amounted to $153.1 million, or 71.8%.

Wesleyan Degrees To 263

Nebraska Wesleyan University will award degrees to 263 graduates, the second largest class in its history, at 6 p.m. today in Magee Memorial Stadium.

Kenneth W. Thompson, vice president of the Rockefeller Foundation, will speak.

Commencement day activities start with a breakfast for alumni who are members of the classes of 1921 or earlier. At baccalaureate services in O'Dowell auditorium at 11 a.m. NWU President Vance Rogers will speak on "Hippies, Halos, and Hypocrites."

A garden party is scheduled from 2:30 to 4:30 p.m. at the home of Provost and Mrs. Frederick Blumer, 5535 Madison. The commencement band directed by Prof. Gary Nyberg will present a concert in the stadium beginning at 5:15 p.m.

CTU Position Given Magness

James C. Magness has been appointed supervisor-labor relations for Central Telephone and Utilities Corp. and subsidiaries.

Magness, with the Southern Nevada Division of CTU 14 years, began as a switchman, later became warehouse supervisor.

Magness then personnel director, and is now traffic line superintendent.

He is a graduate of Phoenix College in Arizona where he studied business administration.

Rearrangement and redecorating at the 13th and L drive-in of the First National Bank is credited in part for the "biggest month in our history," drive-in manager Allen J. Mart says.

The rearrangement affects the interior where walk-in customers are served. In the past there were four teller stations in the center of the lobby, with auxiliary facilities on the perimeter. The remodeling put five teller stations along a wall, with other facilities redistributed.

The bank has 19 employees at 13th and L. No dollar estimate of the cost was disclosed for the changes.

Power Setup 'A Larger Share of Profits'

Towns Tell NPPD: You Do the Work

By HAROLD SIMMONS

Over 200 Nebraska towns have indicated emphatically that they're more than willing to forego the responsibilities of operating their own electrical systems if the Nebraska Public Power District (NPPD) will continue doing that chore and give the towns a larger share of the "profits."

Slightly more than 90% of the towns where NPPD has provided electrical service at retail for 30 years have decided they don't want to assume operation of the electrical systems when the towns legally acquire ownership Jan. 1, 1972.

Instead, the towns have signed agreements leasing their electrical systems to NPPD for 15 years.

And these agreements provide that NPPD will pay the towns 10% of annual, adjusted gross revenues — a sum that will be larger than any previous agreements and larger than the "profit" if the towns operated the systems themselves.

Absolutely No Cost

Under terms of State law, a total of 227 towns where NPPD operates electrical systems will assume ownership of these systems on Jan. 1, 1972, at absolutely no cost to the towns.

The Jan. 1 date marks the time when the bonded debt incurred by the old Consumers Public Power District (now NPPD) to purchase the electrical systems from private power companies will have been totally repaid.

NPPD, however, has never wanted to get out of the retail electrical business, even though a large part of its operation is sale of wholesale power.

In an attempt to stay in the retail business, NPPD some years ago entered contracts with most of the 227 towns that provided NPPD would make payments to the towns of 2% gross revenues until Jan. 1, 1972, and boost these payments to 7% after Jan. 1, if NPPD continued operating the systems.

But NPPD management subsequently came up with the lease agreement offer, which it considers more attractive to itself and the towns.

10% to the Towns

The lease agreements not only provide that NPPD will annually pay the towns 10% of adjusted gross revenues but that NPPD will also make the in lieu of tax payments — most of which goes to local schools and 25%-40% goes to the city itself.

The lease agreements also provide that NPPD will make all normal system improvements at its own cost, and these improvements will become city property.

NPPD is also committed to complete utility responsibility for management, planning, engineering, load promotion, industrial development and community development.

NPPD General Manager D. W. Hill said the basic reason NPPD offered the lease agreements to the towns is that it stabilizes NPPD's future in the retail electrical business.

Additionally, Hill said, a majority of the towns said they wanted NPPD to continue operating the systems — which bears out the fact that few complaints are offered about the quality of reliability of NPPD service.

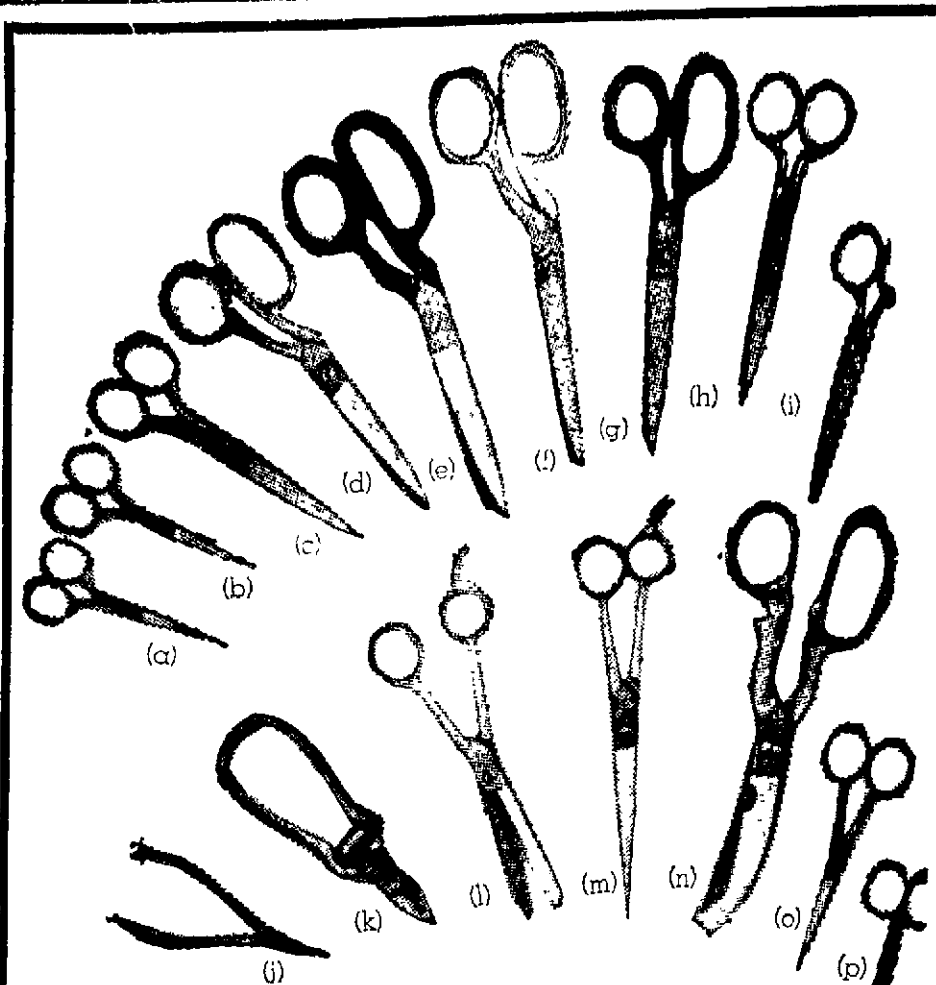

Important Factor

Both Hill and Wayne Barber, NPPD marketing director, said the 10% payments NPPD will make to the towns would likely exceed any excess revenues from a municipally owned system.

This was considered an important factor in 205 of the 227 towns signing the lease agreements since March 1, since many city officials look to electrical revenues as a means of relieving general city financial woes.

Hill said remaining towns that have not signed the lease agreements include larger towns such as Kearney, York, O'Neill and Chadron.

For these towns, Hill said, it is conceivable municipally operated systems could be profitable in the sense excess electrical revenues would be available for other city purposes.

Airports

Intrepid Birdmen Evident

By GORDON HANSON
Grand Island Independent
For The Associated Press

Grand Island — Airline pilots have been known to complain about some of the nation's major airports, such as the nearly-downtown Kansas City airport and the mountain-top, short runway facility at Charleston, W. Va.

But few have had the chance to compare these to such facilities as the "sand and grass" strip at Tilden . . . or the strip at Rose which is "soft in spring" and has "cattle on runways."

The Nebraska Airport Directory, issued by the Department of Aeronautics, includes a section called "personal use fields."

There must be intrepid birdmen in Nebraska, considering the descriptions of those personal use fields.

Take the Hansen airstrip at Tilden, for example. Remarks to pilots in the directory say the strip is comprised of "sand and grass, irrigation pipe on strip and cattle grazing."

Now that's a challenge to any pilot.

All is not roses at the Rose strip, which the directory reports is "soft in spring, cattle on runways, haystacks in fall, runways, not marked."

A goose might have a tough time setting down on that one.

Eagles and hawks might like the one at Valentine, which is "rough and soft in spring, many gophers."

A little of everything is offered at a private strip near Atkinson, where pilots are informed about "mowing, snow removal Flight instruction Spraying "

They've made it even more intriguing at Crookston. The directory says "Caution Holes marked with tires " It might be better to just contend with the holes

You can't be certain whether it's top crops and poor cows at these two strips. The description for Alda says: "Alfalfa, good condition." At Haigler it's "native grass, mowing. Rough, cattle on runway."

There's a real toughie at Arthur, where " lights will be turned on if requested by telephone Pilots land at own risk " If they're able to telephone for those runway lights, that plane has got the greatest extension cord in the world.

You can get your plane washed quickly at Jansen. What the pilot must do is "watch for irrigation pipes in the summer."

The strip leaving a pilot with mixed feelings is at Hampton, which is in "good condition except when snow is deep "

They apparently never got the job completed at Whitman. The first 250 feet "of the strip is oil surface, west and is grass."

An old aviation axiom holds: "There are old pilots and bold pilots, but no old bold pilots."

Considering some of these Nebraska strips, a pilot might be both bold and old — if he doesn't try a landing.

Rueter's Few Hand Tools Lead To Furniture-Making Business

By MARY KING

The average handyman putters around home with a few woodworking tools for fixing broken screen doors, building fence or remodeling furniture.

The same number of tools started a University of Nebraska Law College senior on a pastime "I just like to do."

Brice Rueter's hobby really began when he was a senior in Wauneta High School. He started building houses for a contractor; progressed as an Officer Vote Set by School Board Tuesday

Lincoln's Board of Education, unchanged by the recent election, will hold its organizational meeting at 8 a.m. Monday in the public schools administration building, 720 S. 22nd.

Officers for the coming year will be elected. Robert Wekeser currently is president, Robert Magee vice president. Both are holdover members.

Members reelected on May 4 are Edward Copple, Mrs. Catherine Angle, Marvin Stewart and John Lux.

The only other items on the agenda are presentations of wage and benefit requests by the schools' clerical and food services staffs.

The Preparing Exceptional People School of St. Marks Methodist Church will receive a $500 grant from the Jimmy Durante Children's Fund of the Fraternal Order of Eagles.

The presentation will be made Sunday at the Eagles Lodge by state Eagle trustee Angela Toth of Omaha and Eagle auxiliary secretary Dorothy Chastil of Lincoln.

Man Committed

A man, 22, who was found to be suffering from schizophrenic paranoia, was committed to the Lincoln Regional Center following a hearing last week before the Lancaster County Mental Health Board.

The only other case before the board, that of a woman, 64, was dismissed.

Seminar Here

The Nebraska Society of Medical Technologists will have a seminar Friday and Saturday at the Nebraska Center. Dr. Roger D. Hamstra, of Denver, hematologist and director of the Colorado Medical Center's School of Medical Technology, will speak.

Your Nurseryman Speaks Right Plants in Right Places Can Lower Noise Level 50%

Noise pollution can be greatly reduced by the planting of trees and shrubs.

In fact, a recent study by the University of Nebraska and the Rocky Mountain Forest and Range Experiment Station shows that noise levels have been lowered as much as 50% by the right plants in the right place.

This information is sure to have a profound impact on landscape design and architecture in the years ahead. The home of the future may well be placed farther back from the street to allow for a belt of noise abating trees.

Obviously evergreens will be most effective because noise pollution is more often a year-around problem. However, it will be necessary to carefully design the plantings to get the best results.

For example, if the major source of noise is from tires hitting the roadway or from low auto exhaust pipes, a low planting as close as possible to the noise source will be best. A row of pfitzers planted as close to the street as the law will allow would be one way of solving this particular problem.

Obviously, if the major noise source is from the high exhaust pipes of today's diesel trucks, the planting should be high growing pines, spruces or firs.

The width and density of the individual evergreen is also an important factor. A lightly foliated, upright juniper only two feet wide will not stop nearly as much noise as a heavy pine that's 10 feet wide.

In this study Prof. David Cook and Dr. D. F. Van Haverbeke have discovered that some plants have very unusual noise abating properties. For example, a wheat stubble field softens and muffles some kinds of noise remarkably well.

Moreover, the road surface itself is a big factor in noise pollution. Concrete is the worst offender. Gravel is not as bad. Plain dirt is best (Obviously, God knew what He was doing when He made dirt.)

Another interesting facet of this study relates to a phenomenon called "white noise." This, quite simply, is sound that is pleasing to the human ear.

For example, the murmur of the wind in a pine, the sound of a leaf rustling, the song of a bird are all noise. Yet, instead of irritating man, these sounds comfort him and help him to bear the raucous sounds that he himself has created.

Now if man can simply create a jet plane that chirps like a chickadee and a diesel truck that purrs like a pussycat, the whole problem can eventually be solved.

Seriously, if man would learn to emulate Mother Nature instead of trying to destroy her, we'd all be better off.

Ground Cover Adds Touch

By EMERY W. NELSON
County Extension Agent

The home with a well planted landscape nearly always has an abundance of ground cover. It provides the finishing touches to make a good landscape exceptional.

Ground cover plants serve many purposes. One of these is to provide variety. They have many textures and sizes which contrast beautifully with the lawn and foundation planting.

In addition, ground cover ties together unrelated shrubs and flowerbeds in the landscape and provide a cover for bare areas of ground.

Ground covers include a wide range of low-growing plants. Many kinds of annuals and perennials can be used. Some of the best are broadleaf evergreens but conifers, junipers and deciduous plants also are suitable.

The more common ground covers used in this climate are vinca, euonymus and ivy. These three plants grow well together or may be used individually.

Some of the cotoneaster also grow flat and horizontal as do a few honeysuckle and juniper.

Securities Prices Keep Meandering

(c) New York Times Service
New York — Evidence that the economy is continuing its gradual recovery — but certainly not at a booming rate — was contained in various statistics flowing out of Washington recently.

The data that confirmed that assessment was the slight rise in April unemployment and the latest reports on personal income and industrial production, which depicted an economy that was still rising, though hardly at a hectic pace.

problems, however, failed to ruffle the financial markets here to any great extent.

Stock prices continued to meander along indecisively for the third consecutive week as the market remained in its mild consolidating phase, oblivious of general news developments, particularly the adverse ones.

National Crane Has AEC Pact

Waverly — National Crane Corp. has a contract from the Atomic Energy Commission to supply a special version of one of its aerial devices for decontaminating drilling equipment and other structures used in connection with underground tests.

Following underground tests, the AEC drills into the earth to chart the effects of the blast.

As a result, the equipment used must be thoroughly cleaned to protect workers from radiation.

The National Crane machine will provide a means of washing surfaces at any height with a blast of hot decontaminating fluid. Following the decontaminating fluid, the machine sprays hot water to rinse the equipment.

The machine is a truck-mounted aerial device with built-in tanks, pumps and fluid heaters. A basket is equipped with a nozzle for spraying and controls to maneuver the basket.

SUNDAY JOURNAL AND STAR STAFF COLORPHOTO BY BOB GORHAM

'Pollution Fight Begins at Home'

By JOHN BARBOUR, AP

Palos Verdes Estates, Calif. — Sue Bold works the crossword puzzle in the mornings, after she's taken the kids to school and has sent her husband off to work. She likes to look out the family room window at the blue Pacific a block away. On a clear day she can see Santa Catalina Island.

After the puzzle, she gets on with the day's duties, the housecleaning, shopping, maybe an afternoon church club meeting or bridge, or trying to lure the hummingbirds to the feeder in the backyard. A warm, comfortable, moderately busy life.

"I never thought much about it before," she said pushing back her dark hair from her forehead.

It? Pollution.

"But I noticed lately I've had to empty the trash basket twice a day. A year ago I don't think it filled up more than once every two days."

Trash Basket

The trash basket. Signal omen of the built-in waste in American living, the end-result of Madison Avenue packaging, supermarket convenience, the great proclivity for disposable products. Use once and throw away.

No deposit, no return. Cleans in a jiffy, and pops into the wastebasket. Unbreakable plastic and disposable diapers. No muss, no fuss. Super absorbent. Clean up today's spills by magic. Use it, burn it, bury it. Flush it and forget it.

Down the good old disposal. Good old Colorado River water. Swish, swish away and down to the blue Pacific.

Not that everyone believes in everything. Good grief, there's lots of stupidity in this ecology thing. Too many experts. But that shouldn't kill the idea. The heart of the idea is people like the Bolds, the ones who can do something about it.

Experiment

As an experiment, Sue and John Bold and their three daughters were asked what they thought they could do about pollution. They looked at lists of suggested ways of saving, wasting less. They asked each other what they thought was practical in terms of their lives.

How long do you take in the shower? No one knew for sure.

Terri, 14, thought maybe half an hour. Kathy, 11, always certain, said flatly, "An hour." Andrea, 10, wasn't sure.

"All right," said Sue Bold. "Let's start taking five-minute showers."

Outrage

"Five minutes?" said Kathy. The outrage was expected. "To wash? And wash my hair? What if I get soap in my eyes?"

Her mother frowned. "All right then, six minutes."

And how about electric lights? A reluctant okay to try to conserve electricity.

"How about taking a lunch box to school. That way I wouldn't have to buy extra paper bags."

"A lunch box? That's square."

"Can't I just buy my lunch?" asked Terri.

"Can't I bring my paper bag home and use it again?" Bless you, Andrea.

The compromise wins, at least tonight.

"How about walking to Girl Scouts? You know everytime I take out the car..."

"Wednesday I can't."

"I've got this big fat bruise right here on my foot and whenever I walk..."

School Talk

Has there been much talk about pollution in school?

In Kathy's class at a parochial school there has been. "They have a poster on the board that says, 'Earth Day is Everyday.'" And they learn about low-lead gasoline and phosphate detergents.

At Terri's public high school, right across the street, they had a slave market to support local environmental causes. You could buy a senior to carry your books and other menial chores.

During the first day Sue Bold had put a bottle of water in the refrigerator and it would be used henceforth. Running water till its cold is wasteful in an area where water is expensive and fire is a hazard, Pacific Ocean or no Pacific Ocean.

She had reinstalled the dishcloth. No sense in using paper toweling for everything.

After the kids had gone off to do their homework, John and Sue talked about what had happened to their trash basket. "It's really only a matter of habit," Sue said. "It's just a case of trying to develop new habits."

All right John, what about your new habits? "You mean, take a bus to work?"

No Buses

A little research showed that John, with 13 miles between home and plant, can't take a bus. There just aren't any. A bike? Thirteen miles? No way.

Compromise again. When possible, share rides with one or two guys who work in the same area. "You know," John said later, "I'd rather take a bus, if there were a bus. I'd like to read the paper on the way to work. And it would save me time and money."

They moved out here to get away from the smog. Both family cars are equipped with approved smog control devices and use low-lead gasoline.

John works for Garrett Corp.'s Air Research Division, a wholly owned

Beaver Crossing 'Unique'

By MILDRED STEWART
Special Writer

In a sleepy little valley, 35 miles west of Lincoln, lies the village of Beaver Crossing, the only one in the world and nearly 100 years young.

Beaver Crossing has been the subject of many a joke: "Did you ever hear of a Beaver Crossing, Nebraska?" irked townfolk. They tired of the "moss-grown" gag, but now they're proud of the unusual name.

It's well-known that this village of 450 inhabitants was not named for a "traveling rodent." The legend is that beavers cut down trees, that fell across the stream, making a crossing or fording point for man.

But Beaver Crossing was named for an actual crossing on little Beaver Creek. There's no Beaver Creek at Beaver Crossing? Well, no, there isn't—not now. But there was once.

Beaver Crossing was founded in 1872 and was the first town to be given a name in Seward County (formerly Green County).

The old westbound California Trail crossed Beaver Creek four miles northwest of the present townsite. It was an important place, since hundreds of travelers used the route as they headed for the West through Nebraska City.

Roland Reed, a rancher, who lived near the crossing, was appointed the region's first postmaster. He chose the name of Beaver Crossing, and the office was in his own home.

As traffic increased along the California Trail, other businesses sprang up at the crossing, a tavern, a trading post and a general store. T. S. Tisdale was the storekeeper. He eventually became the postmaster and moved the postoffice and store to the present townsite. A flour mill erected on the ranch of Ross Nichols became the center of business for the community. For 99 years the village has grown and declined, four miles from the crossing that gave it a name.

There's nothing at the original crossing except a pleasant tree-shaded creek, a sloping gully where the wagons crossed and time-worn wagon tracks that disappear over the crest of a hill, all that remains of the trail. The crossing is on private land used for pasture, at least a mile from a public road.

As a minister's wife in Beaver Crossing from 1955 to 1963, I remember a lily-pond, a beauty to behold. Travelers

Terri, Kathy and Andrea grin out of the shower with Andrea holding the timer, which warns them five minutes has past.

Board Member 'Hooked on Education'

By LINDA ULRICH

Mrs. John C. Angle is hooked — on education. Starting her second four-year term as the only female member of the Lincoln Public School's Board of Education, Mrs. Angle said, "I must have always been interested in education even if I wasn't really conscious of it and now I'm so hooked on it, if I wasn't on the school board I'm sure I would be working somewhere else in the field."

Mrs. Angle's career as a member of the school board began, strangely enough, at a luncheon party a few months before the election. The group was concerned with the need for better communications between the school system and the public and started going around the table listing possible candidates, she explained.

None of the persons on the list agreed to run and "finally someone said, 'it looks like you're gonna have to do it,' and I said, 'OK,'" Mrs. Angle said. So she ran and more important, she won.

She believes that most of the problems encountered by a school board are "things that never really get solved but rather call for a specific policy and a continuing effort."

For example, in her first term, the board tried to improve communications between the administration and the public and "to some degree succeeded but the task is never finished."

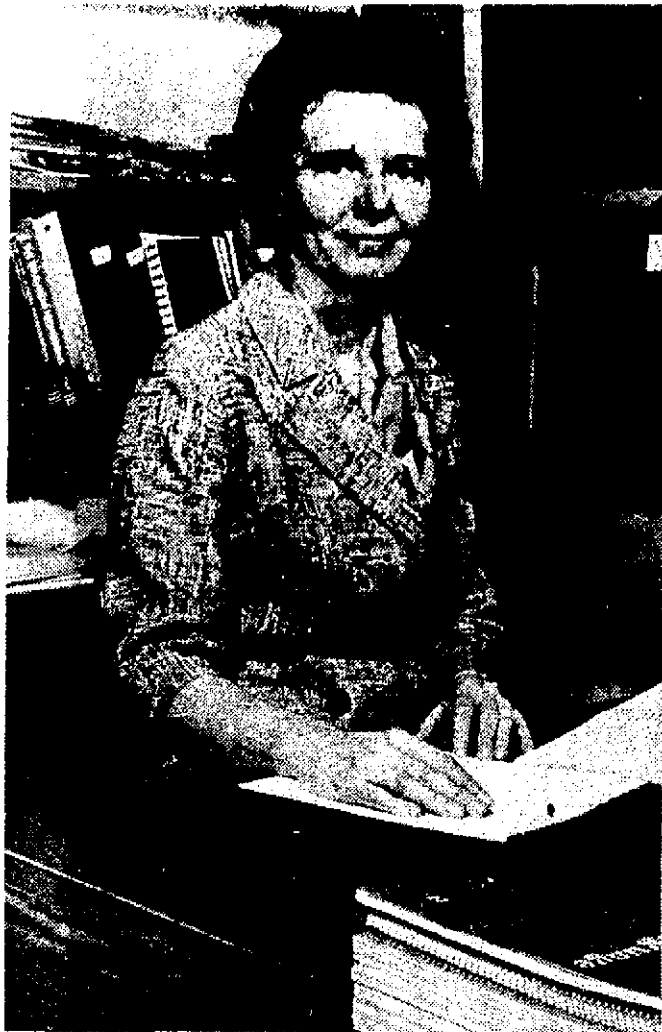

Describing her job as one involving "50 to 60 hours per week," Mrs. Angle said, "If you're talking about the board of education you're talking about constant change."

Some of the changes she would like to see are improved methods of evaluation of learning; increased consultation of students as well as allowing students to voice their questions of concern and initiate things themselves; and continuing to increase cooperation between the University of Nebraska and the public schools to improve teacher education.

One of Mrs. Angle's main concerns is improving the success of children learning to read, specifically the attempts being made to devise a total system for the teacher to coordinate what's being done for the child learning to read as well as the child not learning to read.

According to Mrs. Angle, the old belief that increasing the staff is one way to improve education isn't necessarily true . . . "We now know that just adding staff does not provide all the answers."

"Before we thought that you could judge how well you were doing by factors such as the staff-student ratio and how much you were spending, but the end results are what really count," she said.

Mrs. Angle at her desk.

"We now think that in order to know how well we're doing, a better measure is how much the students know . . . to measure output rather than input," the school board member added.

Mrs. Angle's interest in education is reflected in the 25 years of volunteer work she performed before her election. She was on the Junior Great Books Committee, the Board of the Public Library, president of both the Child Guidance Center and the Junior League and was a volunteer teacher for children at the Lincoln Regional Center. She is currently a member of the Nebraska Art Assn.

The Angles have two children, Margy, an M.A. candidate at the University of Wisconsin and Jim, a sophomore at Macalester College at St. Paul, Minn.

Betrothal Revealed

Columbus — The Rev. and Mrs. Max O. McCamley announce the engagement of his daughter Kathryn Sue to Cadet Lee Charles Stinson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles N. Stinson.

The bride-elect attended Morningside College at Sioux City, Iowa, and is now a junior at Lycoming College at

A June 1972 wedding is planned.

Volunteers Honored

Volunteer Bureau of the Lincoln Area will have its annual recognition of volunteers at a tea 2:30 p.m. Friday in the fifth floor auditorium of the Lincoln Center Bldg.

Robert Rudell, bureau president and Robert Smith, treasurer, will speak.

The volunteers will receive certificates for community service.

Miss Norma Carpenter is event chairman. Other committee members are Miss Amber White, Mrs. Roy Scheaff and Mrs. Virgilene Cronkite.

subsidiary of Signal Oil. His company fought for the pressurization system in the super-sonic transport. Signal Oil is a major petroleum producer.

He says: "I wouldn't tell Sue or the kids they had to go through with this. It was strictly up to them."

'Funny'

"It's sort of funny. Before you called, we were out at a friend's house and this friend said you should put stones in your toilet to cut down on water use. Sue said, 'Not on your life.'"

As a matter of fact, the stones in the toilet are on the list of suggested conservation techniques. The idea is to put the stones or bricks into the back of the water closet to displace more water, to lessen the amount available for each flush. But why does the toilet hold so much anyway? If it isn't necessary, why doesn't the manufacturer of toilets hold the water capacity down?

So we are all captives of what we buy.

As Sue shops, she tries to measure what is important and what isn't. This supermarket offers milk and eggs in biodegradable cartons. But nowhere in her neighborhood can she buy milk in returnable bottles. The alternative is taking milk from a milkman at almost twice the price.

She uses two low-phosphate detergents recommended by friends. She finds them adequate. Phosphates, at least in closed bodies of water, like Lake Erie, encourage vegetative growth, algae and the like, which devour available oxygen in the water forcing the fish away. The algae also leaves a nasty scum which gives drinking water a bad taste and smell.

Where?

The kids are stumped by three naively simple questions. So are John and Sue. Where does your water come from? Where does it go? Where does your electricity come from when you flick the switch.

John figures the water comes from the Colorado River. But where does it go? He's not sure. What about electric power? He's fairly certain it's mostly hydroelectric. But some must come from that big, grim structure on the shore to the north, in Redondo Beach.

Sue visits the city engineer. The water does indeed come from the Colorado River.

Where does the sewage go? To the Los Angeles County

Sanitation District Six plant in Harbor City to the south.

With the kids in tow, Sue Bold visited the Southern California Edison plant in Redondo Beach. The plant produces most of the power they receive.

Not Visible

The plant last year burned 80% natural gas, 20% Indonesian oil, low in sulphur, low in ash. There should not be visible smoke.

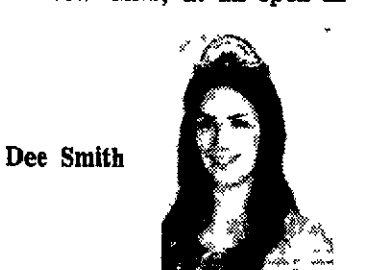

Problems? Less and less natural gas is available for burning. More and more oil will be needed. That will probably mean a greater potential for pollution.

The second visit for the Bolds that day is the sewage plant in Harbor City. Here, all of their flushing and washings come to be treated before they vent to the blue Pacific.

LODGES

Officers Selected

Miss Dee Smith will be installed 2 p.m. next Sunday as worthy advisor of Assembly No. 6, International Order of Rainbow Girls, at an open installation at the Masonic Temple.

Other new officers to be installed include Becky Yeak, worthy associate advisor; Mitzi Svitek, sister of charity; Dagmar Auers, sister of hope; Lynn Gooding, sister of faith; Jane Gabelhaus, recorder; Ruth Auers, treasurer; Cindy Mahman, chaplain; Susan Varda, drill leader; Diana Gottshall, sister of love; Sally Schrader, sister of religion; Janet Reighard, sister of nature; Connie Worth, sister of immortality; Cindy Johns, sister of fidelity; Elizabeth Fenton, sister of patriotism; Susan Taylor, sister of service; Rochelle Larson, confidential observer; Kathy Serrin, outer observer; Linda Sell, musician; and Kim Hansen, choir director. Returning as worthy grand advisor is Miss Kristi Bozarth.

Celebrate 25th

Brainard — Mr. and Mrs. Valerian Sygal observed their 25th wedding anniversary with their family. Relatives and friends also honored the couple at a surprise potluck dinner. The Sygals were married May 4, 1946, in Morse Bluffs.

This plant processes 350 million gallons of sewage a day. It is a sedimentation process. In the first tanks, the water sits until the heavy silt drops to the bottom. In the secondary tanks, skimmers on top and bottom remove more sediment. In a third set of tanks, the water is imprisoned with anaerobic bacteria which devour more of the sewage and as a byproduct turn out a gas which is used to produce the plant's electricity.

"We are constantly trying to improve the quality of the water we send back to the ocean," said an engineer. "We want to do better."

John Bold asks a salient question: "If there were less water coming through, could you do a better job of cleansing it before it goes back?"

The sanitation engineer is frank: "Yes."

The five-minute showers make sense. So does wetting the toothbrush and turning the water off while you brush. Andrea did it better. She filled a cup.

Disagreeable

On the way home, the kids look back on what they consider the most disagreeable thing they've had to do. To Terri it is the five-minute showers. To Andrea, it is separating, washing and stamping down the cans. To Kathy it was the visit to the sewage plant.

Back in the nice clean air of Palos Verdes, the kids played with the new timer bought to help them cut their shower time.

Sue set the groceries on the kitchen countertop and told how hard it was to buck the system. "The stockboy got mad at me because I asked him not to use so many bags."

Now the Bolds continue their one-family war against waste. They separate their aluminum and steel cans, their non-returnable glass bottles, and return them all to the recycling center, along with their bundled newspapers.

At night you can scarcely tell they are home. They are still turning out lights in unused rooms.

"We're going on, you know," Sue assured. "We'll keep on stamping the cans, and separating the bottles and tying up the papers, and holding down on the water and the electricity. But I kept wondering, even if we do, what's the use? Other people don't, and things will keep on getting

DIARY

One mystery has been solved.

Several persons in Lincoln have received telephone calls from a gentleman in Beverly Hills, Calif., who had been stationed at Lincoln Air Force Base in the 1940s.

He has been trying to find out the whereabouts of Dorothy Anderson, who during the time he was in Lincoln was a volunteer for the USO and played the piano at many programs at the base.

The gentleman told us he was planning a trip in a few days and wanted to get in touch with Mrs. Anderson because the itinerary included a stop in Lincoln.

"Twas Alice Biberstein, who was very active in USO musical programs during those 1940 years, who solved the problem.

The gentleman said he had left Lincoln in 1945.

Shortly thereafter, Mrs. Anderson married Joe Doller, who also had been stationed at LAFB. They now live in Melbourne, Fla., according to Mrs. Doller's mother, Mrs. Claude W. Johnson.

New Book

A new book by Marion Marsh Brown has been published by The Westminster Press.

"Marnie," the story of a little girl growing up on a farm in the 1900s, is based on the author's childhood.

The author, known in Lincoln and who participated in the Book Fair a few years ago, has resigned from the faculty of the University of Nebraska-Omaha where she was a professor of English.

She still resides in Omaha and is devoting her time to writing.

Methodist Facilities Being Used

Take a couple of modern-building bees," complete with raising of the rafters.

Add a background of 15 years of God's Acre and Lord's Portion parades and auctions in Beaver Crossing.

Hundreds of man hours of volunteer labor have resulted in a nearly debt free $75,000 United Methodist Church, to be consecrated May 23. About one-fourth of the work was contributed by members, according to the Rev. Harold Coates, pastor.

"We'll consecrate now and dedicate when it's paid for," he explained. Bishop Noah W. Moore and Dr. Lawrence Davis, Lincoln Dist. superintendent, will take part in 11 a.m. and 2:30 p.m. services.

The Rev. E. B. Stewart of Avoca, former pastor who began a program to build the sanctuary in 1956, is expected to attend. When the Rev. Mr. Coates became pastor in 1963, more than $13,000 was on hand for the church.

Ground was broken June 14 next to the structure built in 1905. Construction was begun in August. Ervin Barth was building committee chairman for the 200-member parish.

The completed facility is T-shaped, with a fellowship hall, offices and kitchen at cross-points with the sanctuary. A 7-classroom education unit and library are on the lower level below the fellowship hall.

Church Plans Centennial

The centennial of the United Church of Christ, First Congregational, will be observed in Crete next Sunday.

The Rev. Scott Libbey, conference minister, will speak at the 10 a.m. service. A noon dinner and informal afternoon service are planned.

Back-to-back Methodist Churches in Beaver Crossing offer a 66-year comparison in architecture and facilities.

Beaver Crossing 'Well' Known

went out of their way to view the sight.

Beaver Crossing had the county's first public swimming pool, sandbottom, located in the 9-acre city park. After a cemented swimming pool was built at Seward the Beaver Crossing pool was stocked with fish, so the "little fry" could enjoy fishing. Later the pool was filled in.

Until a few years ago Beaver Crossing held a three-day July Picnic, which dated to the 1880s.

More than a decade ago Ed Noler, local businessman and former county commissioner, searched for cemeteries throughout the county which had been forgotten, were grassy and weed-grown. Without pay, he and Frank Hubertus, American Legion members and other volunteers annually give their time and muscles to this cleanup project. The county has a small budget item to cover additional expenses.

Flowing Wells

Beaver Crossing is known for its flowing (artesian) wells. The first such well was brought in about 1895. Many homes in and near Beaver Crossing have made use of flowing wells all these years. In 1966 a long, hot, dry summer showed its effects in the community, and the famed flow of the wells was slowed considerably. In a strip about 12 miles long and 2 miles wide along the west fork of the Big Blue River artesian wells are common. Many irrigation systems have been set up, and those who are able to take advantage of them have bumper corn and grain crops.

The Beaver Crossing Flowing Well Grange, which takes its name from these wells, was rated for 13 years as one of the top 10 granges in the nation. When it was rated third, the group, received a cash award which was used to build a Grange hall.

In recent years Beaver Crossing retained its elementary school, but junior and senior high students attend the new consolidated Centennial school. Utica elementary students go by bus to Waco. In the early 1960s the Beaver Crossing school was expanded to include band room, a cafeteria and four new classrooms. The absence of a high school has hindered the growth of the town.

New Buildings

Other new buildings in the community include a brick postoffice, a laundromat (which burned down and was replaced), a completely renovated variety store, and grocery store and cafe. Some older buildings have been razed. The main streets have been paved south and west to meet the Interstate 80 exchange north of the village.

The new $75,000 United Methodist Church has been completed. The Rev. E. B. Stewart, who had much experience with God's Acre and Lord's Portion parades and auctions in Iowa, started a similar program at Beaver Crossing in 1956. When he moved in 1963, the Rev. Harold Coates continued the program. The past two years an intensive fund canvass has been made for the new Church. It is being constructed just south of the present frame building.

Many new homes have also been built. Although Beaver Crossing is still the butt of name jokes, it remains a healthy, peaceful little village, where neighbors have neighbors, and friends are true friends. One has a feeling of home, security and a sense of well being that "God is in his heaven and all's right with the world."

LCA Nebraska Synod to Meet

Omaha — The 1971 convention of the Nebraska Synod, Lutheran Church in America, (LCA) is planned Monday through Wednesday at Kountze Memorial Church in Omaha.

Dr. Reuben Swanson of Omaha, synod president, said more than 400 delegates and visitors are expected.

Speakers will include Dr. Edmund Steimle of New York, professor of homiletics at Union Theological Seminary, and Dr. Melvin Hammarberg of Minneapolis, president of the church's Minnesota Synod.

There is a possibility a covenant relationship may be established between the Nebraska Synod and Midland Lutheran College at Fremont, which it supports.

Tuesday luncheon forums will focus on the church and the aging, Immanuel Medical Center's expansion plans, the church and the city, confrontation and sensitivity, Project Equality, serving the mentally retarded, coordinated service to families, the ecumenical movement, the church in town and country and first communion and confirmation.

The convention world missions banquet is planned Tuesday evening.

One question that has always fascinated students of history as well as politicians and even newspaper readers is: What makes a person a natural leader? What were the factors that made Churchill, Roosevelt, Stalin, and Hitler powerful leaders in this century and Lincoln, Napoleon, and Caesar powerful leaders in the past? Two common-sense views have emerged in response to this question. One is that a person assumes and exerts leadership by dint of his own strong personality. The other view, which contradicts this "great-man" theory of history, is that leaders are created by the demands of a situation, often a critical one. Which theory do you agree with most?

Freedom Flame On Mall

By GLENDA PETERSON

Travelers on K St. may have wondered who was planning to grill steaks on the 15th St. Mall across from the Capitol. But a fire is burning there to feed the soul, not the body.

It's a "Flame of Freedom" which will burn permanently as does the "Eternal Flame" on John F. Kennedy's grave in Arlington National Cemetery outside Washington, D.C.

The "Flame of Freedom" was a centennial gift to the State of Nebraska from the State American Legion, and is dedicated to Nebraska veterans of all wars.

Lincoln architect Lawrence Enersen drew plans for the flame, the Legion paid for installation with donations from members, and the city will pay the gas bill. The flame is electrically wired so that if it blows out, it relights itself.

Located in a stone base three feet three inches in diameter and six inches above the sidewalk, the continuing flame is the latest in improvements on the 15th St. Mall.

Enersen first presented a plan for beautification of 15th St. to the City Council in January 1966. The City Council adopted the plan the following May, to be financed by federal and city funds, and assessments against adjacent private property owners.

Construction began late in 1967, but the project soon ran into some hitches.

Lincoln had hoped to get 59% of the total cost from federal funds, but was granted only $99,964 instead of the requested $195,965, with only $39,986 earmarked for the 15th St. development.

The project also got into a legal tangle with an adjacent rental property owner who filed suit contending that construction of the mall would be detrimental to the value of his property.

The M. W. Anderson Construction Co., with an apparent low bid of $333,685, began the project Dec. 21, 1967, even though the suit was still pending in Lancaster District Court. While construction was underway, petitions for injunctions to stop the work were thrice denied.

Then in early 1969, mall construction was held up by a combination of bad weather and a lengthy construction strike.

The first of five fountains finally was turned on July 30 of

GERALDINE CHAPLIN "THE HAWAIIANS" COLOR

Powerful 'Act' On Menu With Triple Dip Cone

Genevieve Bujold, Donald Sutherland.

Act of the Heart, now showing at the Nebraska, regrettably will be overlooked for slicker productions. It is startling, powerful Genevieve Bujold gives a poignant characterization as a young girl who goes to Montreal to find spiritual fulfillment by singing in a church choir and tutoring a fatherless young boy in French.

She is selected as a soloist in a non-denominational choir under the direction of a Catholic monk (Donald Sutherland). She is drawn to him and he to her and their love surfaces

The picturesque Canadian scenes are captured in most sensitive photography, as is the love. Although Sutherland is subdued in his role, and rightly so after MASH and Kelly's Heroes, Miss Bujold's portrayal is deep and stunning

The film is not for everyone, because its contemporary theme offers comment on the cloistered life of the church. But certainly today its controversial theme is realistic.

Beset by a number of personal problems, the young girl is led to believe (by the monk) that the world needs to be startled to the core to make it sit up and take note of its social problems. Whether her sacrifice is as meaningful to the world as it is to her is doubtful

The Act of the Heart is an inspired film that deserves much more attention than it will probably receive (GP)

Capote's 'Trilogy'

Truman Capote's Trilogy, also showing at the Nebraska now, is like watching some of the finest live theater that the stage has to offer

It not only combines some of the most tender and nostalgic stories by a literary master, but it is performed by some of the country's finest thespians

The first of the three-part film, originally produced for television, is entitled Mariam.

Mildred Natwick is the nanny who has been all but forgotten by her former charges. Miriam lives in an illusion of photographs which tell her she is still wanted and needed, when in reality she is forgotten in her old age and mental disorders.

The second episode, entitled Among the Paths to Eden, is brilliantly played by Maureen Stapleton and Martin Balsam. This bittersweet tale is about a plainjane spinster who consoles widowers at the cemetery in search of a husband

Third Segment

The final segment, A Christmas Memory, was aired a couple of times on television and earned a number of awards. Geraldine Page is brilliant in this memorable Christmas childhood experience. Capote narrates.

Trilogy is like a three-dipper ice cream cone—a triple treat! (G)

Gruesome Scene

Gimme Shelter, opening Thursday at the Nebraska, depicts the gruesome U.S. tour of the Rolling Stones.

Although the movie was probably originally intended to be like the Woodstock festival, the the knifing, the film is loaded with lots of skin, booze, grass and super-weird people.

This trip is not really worth the effort. And unfortunately there is really little insight into the person of Mick Jagger and his form of musical charisma. (R)

English History

Another historical epic is Cromwell, opening Wednesday at the State.

Although out of tune with the popular films of the time, Cromwell has a touch of the awesome Camelot in its optimistic finale.

And who but Richard Harris should hold down the starring role of Cromwell? Alec Guinness plays King Charles I.

The battle royale between the Puritans and Parliament in the Britain of 1640 is mighty (bloody) and sometimes comes across as comical for its antique methods of warfare.

The crux of the situation as presented in the film is the confrontation of the strong and inflexible Cromwell and a weak-kneed king.

concert incident at the Altamont, Calif., race track turned out to be a violent knife-wielding session by the Hells Angels.

Even though the festival concept seems practically dead and gone as far as the movie industry is concerned, the death of a number of concert-goers at the hands of the Angels will probably make people think twice about supporting this film. The peaceful feeling of Woodstock was not evident at Altamont.

In addition to showing an instant replay in slow motion of

Although there is little penetrating historical information about the actual conflict, the film does whet one's appetite as to the power and accomplishments of Cromwell. Recollection of a trip to London and seeing the statue of Cromwell outside of the Houses Parliament further creates curiosity about this period of English history.

The film, if not too provocative, is truly a spectacle in the period costuming and grandeur. The detail is impressive, and few family films like this are still produced. (G)

In NEBRASKA

Last Week's Picture

Plattsmouth looked like this in the early 1870s. Steamboats on the Missouri River found it a good landing place and the Burlington and Missouri River Rail Road in Nebraska was operating trains on its line to Ashland and Lincoln.

The largest building near the camera is the railroad's five-stall roundhouse and just beyond it is a taller structure that appears to be a water tower to supply the locomotive tenders. This picture is believed to have been taken about 1872.

100 years ago this week

Old NEBRASKA

1871: A large crew of men and horse teams began digging away at Market Square in Lincoln to cut it down to a grade that would allow pedestrians on all sides of it to view each other. The dirt was to be used to fill in the ravines that disfigured 9th and 10th Sts. south of the square.

1881: The old Dawson residence, long regarded as an eyesore on the south side of Market Square, was being razed to make way for brick business buildings.

1891: Flags were flying at half-staff at the Statehouse in mourning of the death of former Gov. David Butler.

1901: Two innovations in University of Nebraska football were announced for the upcoming season. "The first of these will be something entirely novel in western athletics—a training camp," a Lincoln sportswriter wrote. The second innovation was a training table.

1911: Some of the women of Havelock filed a petition with the suburb's City Council to keep saloons off the main street.

1921: Fire raged through the Yankee Hill Brick Manufacturing Co. plant near Lincoln, causing $60,000 to $75,000 dollars damage. It was expected that the plant would not be restored to working order for several months.

1931: The Nebraska State Republican Club was formed in Lincoln. Revitalization of the Republican Party in the state was the slogan of the organization.

1941: Gov. Dwight Griswold announced he had accepted a post as honorary chairman of the USO for Nebraska and urged that the people of the state support the project. He emphasized the need for maintaining morale as part of national defense. USO stood for United Service Organizations, providing entertainment, lounges and other services for military personnel.

1951: Charles S. (Cy) Sherman, long-time sports editor of The Lincoln Star, died. His love for college football had become a Midwestern legend and it was he who named the University of Nebraska athletic teams the Cornhuskers.

1961: A bronze bust of the late U.S. Sen. George W. Norris was put on permanent display in the State Capitol. The McCook resident had served seven years as a district judge, 10 years as a congressman and 30 years as a senator.

Last Week 1971: St. Elizabeth Community Health Center at 555 S. 70th, successor to Lincoln's first general hospital, was being governed for the first time in history by a board of directors representative of the community at large. Previously the hospital, founded in 1880 at 11th and South, had been governed by the sisters of St. Francis. The new board included only one sister.

Action by the Legislature affirmed plans to close the Nebraska Orthopedic Hospital at 10th and South. It had been a state-supported institution since 1905.

An Elder Citizen's Reflections on Spring

By HOWARD R. HEWETT
Special Writer

The April showers that came our way brought a blanket of flowers.

Winter thought it would never have to let go, but when the rain drops began to fall, it could no longer get an icicle in edgewise. It had to give up.

I would not ask for eternal summer and would banish the thought of bleak, drab, everlasting winter. One of life's joys lies in watching the two do battle, the one having to give way to the other.

When it is spring and we feel renewed once more, we see all of nature about us: lowly weeds lifting the ground among the other pushers we recognize as flowers or golden grain to be; buds that will soon be an umbrella of leaves, ground squirrels scurrying about under the watchful eyes of Thomas, the cat, who is biding the time when they get too far from their burrows: baby cottontails wanting to play with the kittens but a bit distrustful.

If we get careless, we will proclaim spring the grandest time of all the year, especially when the daisies in the pasture seem to be white and yellow jewels sewn to a green velvet carpet of grass.

Yet it's hard not to be careless when we see a hen constantly chattering to her little brood, telling of marvelous things for them to eat, warning of dangers they do not know — commands and discipline a good mother is so full of.

June, the month of roses, will soon arrive as a gentle reminder that the turbulence, anxieties and struggles of summer are upon us.

It is then that an old man, who has traveled the way but has judiciously placed the reins in younger hands, feels no pressures, has no deadlines to meet, and may find true joy in what was once hard work.

It is a time when he is privileged to greet the morning sun from atop a roaring diesel in fields where once only the creaking of good leather and the heavy breathing of willing horses was heard.

It is a time to taste and smell and savor the fresh-turned earth, to reflect on the beauty of a countryside that is as new and yet as old as it was those many years ago.

Then, when evening shadows fall and the tiredness from a long day makes the old man's bed a welcome spot on which to fall, just as in youth, sleep robs him of the pleasure of reliving the day.

Suddenly the cocks in the hen house start proclaiming another dawn and his sore muscles assure him that all is good, all is well. There is fire under the boiler yet, though he need no longer use it as he once did. Life is still worth living, has purpose.

The lazy days of autumn, creeping in with flaming glory, will do their best to bury our memories of spring. They cannot, for it is only the beginning of the end.

How empty our short lives would be if winter arrived and there were no spring to follow!

Unimimes Suit Action To Ideas, Not Words

A presentation by the Unimimes, University of Nebraska mime troupe, will be staged at 8 p.m. Friday and Saturday in Howell Theater, 12th and R.

The 12 participants in the show entitled Act Without Words, are members of stage movement and advanced directing classes in the NU Theater Department. Ric Marsh, director of the troupe, also teaches mime classes.

The public program includes a variety of "movement pieces," according to Marsh, who is assisted by Connie McCord. He commented that the show runs the gamut from light to serious pieces and from realistic to abstract.

The Unimimes have been presenting free shows for various church, civic and school groups in Lincoln throughout the year. NU theater director Dallas Williams hopes this mime troupe will be utilized by the University as one of its touring cultural events.

that year, and the first of $15,586 in trees and shrubs were planted. The mall was almost-completed by State Fair time.

The Gateway Sertoma Club presented the city with two polished granite benches to complement the Flame of Freedom on the block between K and L Sts., called the centennial block because it was built with $40,000 in non-tax money from the sale of centennial medals and other objects by the Nebraska Centennial Non-Profit Corp.

Architectural plans call for six to eight benches per block, making a total of 28. The additional benches will be added as money becomes available, according to Lincoln Parks Supt. Don Smith.

The city will also finish planting on the south end of the centennial block next year, as soon as houses are removed along 15th St., Smith said. Litter receptacles also will be added.

Plans for dedication of the Freedom Flame and the centennial block of the mall are now in the works, according to Smith.

Seniors Plan Festival

Senior citizens from across the state will gather in Pershing auditorium at 9 a.m. Tuesday for a show-and-tell festival.

On display will be handcrafted articles and the products of dozens of hobbies that have captured the interest of the elderly.

Music, dramas and dancing will also be a part of the day's events.

Special programs will be provided by the Lincoln Ladies Choir, Lincoln High School Octet and Lincoln High Madrigal singers.

Mayor Sam Schwartzkopf will speak at 1 p.m.

With 12 Seniors, There'll Be a Crowd

By GERTRUDE SKINNER

Ruskin

With all of the Pomp and Circumstance of Edward Elgar's Op. 39-No. 1, Ruskin High School will graduate 12 seniors this week. Sometimes one needs to have one's head rammed into a pencil sharpener before one gets the point.

A number of years past the Skinners received a high school graduation announcement from a great nephew in a distant city. We adored this boy's mother and father and on our frequent visits in their home and their visits in ours, we were much taken with their son.

Family responsibilities, economics and the heavy farm work season were factors we considered while contemplating a trip to the West Coast specifically to attend the commencement exercises at our great nephew's high school. We could not make the trip.

Imagine our surprise to learn later that had we gone cross country for the event some member of his immediate family would have had to give up their allotted seats so that we might attend.

It seems an announcement was definitely not an invitation.

For weeks we felt that a school system that would impose that situation on its graduates was downright unfriendly. But after separating the wheat from the chaff we realized that 1,200 graduates multiplied by countless relatives and friends could lead to a housing disaster. We got the point.

Truly we feel that commencement where, with or without invitation, the pleasure of one's company is expected is the more reasonable situation for us.

After all we helped raise those kids — cried over them, laughed with them, chased them out of our petunia beds onto the ball field.

Why shouldn't we be allowed to share the glory of their biggest night to date?

Multiply 12 by countless relatives and friends and all you get is a good size crowd. Get the point?

Downs Isn't Retiring, Won't Rise as Early Either

New York (AP) — Hugh Downs, host of NBC's Today Show, estimates that if all the hours during which he has been working in front of television cameras were added together he has spent a year and one-half day and night — of his life facing a lens surmounted by a red light.

That he has not suffered from the constant performer's occupational disease, overexposure, is due to Downs' consistent functioning, if not unobtrusively at least quietly, more as catalyst than as star-type personality.

After nine years on Today, Downs' contract runs out next fall and, though he is leaving the show as of Oct. 11, he says he is not retiring from broadcasting.

Rumors that he would retire have disturbed the 50-year-old Downs.

He admits, however, that he occasionally reflects on the joys of sleeping beyond 4:30 a.m. — wakeup time for Today regulars.

"I did leave Concentration after 10 years," he conceded. "It was just too much work and I wanted to devote myself to Today. 'I'm fed up with NBC. But there are some aspects of Today that become abrasive by attrition: soldiers and farmers know about getting up early...'"

Questing Mind

Downs conceals a restless, questing mind behind that low-key exterior and is, surprisingly, an extremely venturesome man. His exploits include sailing across the Pacific, scuba diving, piloting a plane, motorcycling, globe-trotting — and every now and again, writing a book.

The morning show host may be one of the world's champion long-distance commuters.

Downs and his wife, Ruth, had been hunting for years for a place in which to grow some roots. They recently built their home 35 miles outside of Phoenix and now are voting residents of that state. Downs flies the commercial airlines between Arizona and New York most weekends with the same resignation — and luggage — encountered on the 8:14 train from Scarsdale.

"Even after all the years in New York, neither of us really felt that it was really our home," Downs said.

The morning after his pending departure had been announced, Downs, the rest of the show's regulars and his successor, Frank McGee, were telling about his future plans.

"I want to do some more traveling, some lecturing, some writing," Downs said. "And besides, as somebody said, about every 10 years a man needs re-potting."

Pioneer on TV

Downs may be counted among the real television pioneers. A native of Akron, Ohio, he started as a radio announcer at 19 in Lima, Ohio.

"Even then I was ambivalent about my career," he said. "I had such microphone fright at the beginning that my hands

"I had to hook my fingers into the lapels of my jacket so I could hold the script steady."

—Hugh Downs

shook uncontrollably. I had to hook my fingers onto the lapels of my jacket so I could hold the script steady."

He moved on and, after Army service, joined NBC in Chicago. His first television experience came in 1943 when he broadcast a program "that could only have been seen on the 400 sets in Chicago then, mostly in bars."

This changed fast and by 1949 Downs was announcer on some of the first television network shows out of Chicago including Kukla, Fran and Ollie.

For a man in one of the world's most insecure industries, Downs has a remarkable employment record, including 32 years in radio station and television operations connected.

Turbulent Time

He migrated to New York in 1954, and became Jack Parr's announcer and backstop in 1957,

Hugh Downs

for five turbulent years, most of the time also hosting the daytime show Concentration. For one mad period he was up late with Paar, rising before dawn for Today and also working Concentration — Great for the bank account but dreadful for just about every other aspect of existence.

One suspects that Downs, for all his occasional growling about the attrition of early rising, still found plenty of stimulation and excitement in his Today work. Recently he was eager to tackle a short feature on the Center for Democratic Studies even though it meant a quick trip to the West Coast, and he is likely to do a lot of homework on his own when he knows he will be confronting scientists or politicians.

Pat Hingle (left), a versatile Broadway, television and film actor, will play the part of a younger doctor, named Chapman, who comes to Gunsmoke's town next fall on the recommendation of Doc Adams (who's really Milburn Stone-right). This plan permits Stone to extend his recuperation from recent heart surgery while Hingle takes care of things during his absence from the Gunsmoke arena.

Autumn for Good Guys

By NORMAN MARK
(c) Chicago Daily News

This fall, television will enter its year of the cop. Viewers next season will be inundated with law and order. Every night of the week guns will blaze, chases will careen through city and country, and good will win over evil.

The returning programs dealing with police or the law include The FBI, The Lawyers section of The Bold Ones, Gunsmoke, Mod Squad, Hawaii Five-O, Ironside, The Smith Family, Mannix, Adam 12, and Mission: Impossible.

The new series include police of every shape and variety:

NBC will offer Sarge, the story of a detective who becomes a priest; Mystery Movie, which will comprise three different cop stories presented on different weeks, including Peter Falk as a sloppy police lieutenant and Dennis Weaver as a lawman from New Mexico assigned to the New York police department; Nichols, with James Garner as a sheriff in the Southwest; The D.A., with Robert Conrad as a deputy district attorney; and The Partners, with Don Adams and Rupert Crosse as bumbling police detectives. Of eight new NBC shows, five will have police themes.

ABC will give the world Longstreet, with James Franciscus as a blind insurance investigator; Owen Marshall, with Arthur Hill as a dedicated, widowed lawyer and The Persuaders, with Tony Curtis and Roger Moore as adventurers who fight for justice.

CBS will introduce Cade's County, the story of Glenn Ford as a marshal somewhere in the Southwest; Cannon, with William Conrad as a fat private detective; An untitled series resembling this season's TV film Powderkeg, in which Rod Taylor and Dennis Cole work as freelance investigators in the old Southwest, and O'Hara, with David Janssen as a U.S. Treasury Dept. agent.

'Relevance' Recalled

More than a third of all the network programs this fall will concern someone fighting for justice against someone who isn't.

Why, at this point in America's history, have the TV networks embraced law and order?

It's difficult to search for a relationship between what network television does and how America acts.

Nevertheless, analyses can be of some value.

Last year, I believe, several network executives looked around and saw young people forcing Lyndon Johnson out of office, massive marches for peace, the energy devoted to Earth Day, and so on.

These executives then decided to be "relevant." We had almost as many "relevant" programs last fall as we have detective shows next fall. We saw youthful lawyers, doctors, psychologists, school teachers and so on.

And almost every one of the shows was a flop.

In the first place television has seldom been relevant about anything before, so it didn't know quite how to do it. The networks hired old hands, to produce, write, and direct the shows, and the results were out of tune with youth. Then the networks programmed many of the shows early, when no one, least of all young married people with wide-awake young children, wanted to sit and think.

This fall I think the TV networks will be more successful.

Unconsciously, or semi-consciously, the network executives realized that this country badly needs a pat on the back.

We're pulling out of Vietnam and there will be no victory parades, no moments of great triumph. If this isn't a war lost, it's about as close as this country cares to come to one.

Americans desperately need to think of themselves as the good guys once again. That's built into our psyches. We learn that we're the guys in white hats when we're kids.

So this fall millions of Americans will watch dozens of good guys win over evil hundreds of times. They'll see evil make a few good moves in the beginning of the story, but by the end, the lawman-attorney-what-have-you will smile, kiss the pretty girl, wipe his brow and see that his work was goooooood. And the viewer, munching his potato chip, will feel goooooo again.

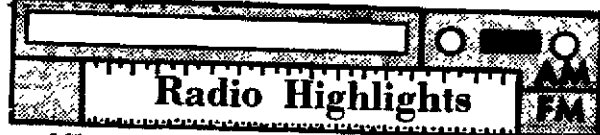

Documentaries Win Eagles

A Cine Golden Eagle was awarded to each of two MGM documentary specials, The Man Hunters and Kifaru—The Black Rhinoceros, by the Council on International Nontheatrical Events.

Nicolas Noxon produced The Man Hunters, which aired two seasons ago and is now the winner of four film honors, and Irwin Rosten produced Kifaru, which aired this season.

Both programs were presented on NBC in the "GE Monogram Series." The Man Hunters also has received the Chris Statuett of the Film Council of Greater Columbus, a gold medal at the Atlanta Film Festival and Emmy nomination last year.

Garroway Plans Return

By Associated Press

The man who made Sentimental Journey his theme song, Dave Garroway, will return to network television after 10 years. He will be host on CBS's summer replacement for The Carol Burnett Show. The hour comedy-variety show, The Newcomers, will feature talent found in a 56-city hunt by the network and affiliated stations. It will start July 10.

NBC's monthly First Tuesday will become Fourth Friday next October when it will be broadcast from 7:30 to 9:30 p.m. on the new day.

Replacement

By Associated Press

CBS's last-minute entry for a summer replacement will be a variety hour starring Sonny and Cher, the husband-wife singing team. It will premiere Aug. 1 and run six weeks in the Sunday evening hour preceding Henry VIII and His Six Wives.

NBC Plans to Trim Peacock's Feathers

(C) New York Times

New York — The National Broadcasting Co. has announced measures aimed at reducing so-called on-the-air "clutter" next season by about 45 minutes a week.

The announcement was made by Don Durgin, president of NBC-TV, at the network's affiliates convention here. Durgin said the time gained by the cut-back, about 30 seconds per hour, would be added to program content.

The action is expected to cause considerable comment in the industry. It was taken, Durgin explained, as the result of a study ordered by Julian Goodman, president of NBC. The plan includes:

—Elimination of the "NBC peacock" opening film on all programs except the Today and Tonight shows, sports programs, specials and the first afternoon program on each day's schedule.

—Elimination of the animated NBC chime at the conclusion of all programs.

—Elimination of production company tags at the conclusion of all programs.

—Restriction of opening and closing credits — exclusive of main titles — to 40 seconds.

—The elimination of five-second promotional spots preceding interior station breaks in one-hour programs, which amounts to approximately 25 per cent of NBC's prime-time evening promotional availabilities.

—Restriction of promotional announcements to a single item instead of the currently acceptable double announcement (future program announcement and the "stay tuned" announcement).

In addition, Durgin said, the NBC-owned stations in New York, Chicago, Cleveland, Washington and Los Angeles will eliminate commercial lead-ins on locally originated programs and audio promotions done over station identification.

"This anti-clutter plan," Durgin said, "is an attempt to start the ball rolling in an area all thoughtful people in the industry have been concerned about for some time. Julian Goodman put the matter simply and forcefully last fall when he said in a memo initiating the study, 'It seems to me that this is a situation where if one company takes affirmative action which gets general recognition, others are likely to follow, and I would like NBC to be that company.'"

Art Museum Opens Oct. 3

Denver (AP) — Art and architecture are being married with quiet ceremony here at the new Denver Art Museum in a block-square medieval setting.

The $6.1 million twin towers of glass-tile, designed by Gio Ponti of Milan and James Sudler Associates of Denver, rise 10 stories like a huge sculpture in the downtown skyline.

The building will have five stories and two half-stories of galleries, providing over 100,000 square feet of display area. It will give the museum the first opportunity in its history to display most of its collections.

The grand opening now is set for Oct. 3.

The museum's $10 million in art includes one of the major American Indian collections, 90% of which formerly had to be stored due to lack of space; the Kress collection of Renaissance art, and important American and European paintings from the 19th and 20th centuries.

Park-Recreation Tours in Omaha

Omaha — A recreation and park touring workshop will be held in Omaha Thursday and Friday under the sponsorship of the Omaha park department, the University of Nebraska Extension Division, the Nebraska Recreation and Parks Assn. and the University of Nebraska — Omaha.

There will be tours of Omaha recreation centers, swimming pools, athletic fields, community centers, golf courses, parks, crafts centers, bike trails and day camps.

The workshop is for park and recreation supervisors, board members, city councilmen and others interested in parks and recreation.

First in Show Lester Acrylic

By HELEN HAGGIE

Each year the annual Lincoln Artists Guild show improves. The show, hanging at Miller & Paine auditorium through next Saturday, is more professional and more varied than those in past years.

Among the 110 pieces selected by Maynard Whitney of Nebraska Wesleyan University and Gail Butts of the University of Nebraska are many media and many styles.

Gladys Lester's Birthplace, in acrylic, is a very representative piece. It received the first place award.

Second place winner is a batik by Donna Barclay and third place went to Stephen Lahr's Three Illusions, also an acrylic.

Julie Saski's Antelope Creek, Joyce Holmgren's White Pot and Carmen Esquenazi's Still Life received honorable mention awards.

The show includes oils, watercolors and acrylic in paintings, pottery, wood sculpture, collages.

It is worth the time to take a look at this spring show and see what Lincoln artists are doing.

Award winner is this acrylic, Birthplace, by Gladys Lester.

DON'T LET PRIDE KEEP YOU FROM HEARING BETTER!

Too proud to admit you can't hear as well as you once did? Neglecting your hearing condition will not cure it. Neglect can even lead to disaster. So don't let pride keep you from seeking professional help.

See your doctor. Accept his medical advice. He'll tell you if medicine or surgery can improve your hearing. Or he'll tell you if a hearing aid can solve your hearing problem.

If he suggests a hearing aid, ask him about the reputation of Radioear. We have been working with doctors since 1924 to help people like you to hear better.

Indians Stories Part Of Summer Reading

"Summer Reading Pow-Wow" is the title of the summer reading program at all of the City Libraries.

Children who have completed grade 1 through junior high may enter. The only requirement is a library card which may be obtained without cost if the child does not already have one.

After 10 books have been read the child will receive a certificate and a ticket to the final program which will be held at Gateway auditorium Aug. 27. One of the ten books should be an Indian story.

Special programs scheduled in June and July at Lincoln City Libraries are:

Tuesdays (Starting June 8): Bethany Branch, 10 30-11 a.m. stories for pre-school to 3rd grade, South Branch, 10 30-11 15 a.m., films and stories for all ages; Main Library, 10 30-11 15 a.m., films for all ages.

Aerogramme Issue May 28 in Chicago

Postmaster General Winton M. Blount has announced the design of a 15-cent aerogramme which will be issued May 28 in Chicago in conjunction with the opening day activities at COMPEX (Combined Philatelic Exhibition of Chicagoland.)

An aerogramme is a "make-it-yourself" envelope. It is delivered by air to all member nations of the Universal Postal Union. The message is written on the inside of the sheet, which is then folded and sealed.

The aerogramme, designed by Soren Noring of New Rochelle, N.Y., consists of two elements which combine to provide an indicia nearly 4½ inches wide. To the left, in gray, are eight-birds in flight. To the right is a white rhomboid, in which is set, in interlocking fashion a red "U" a white "S" and a blue "A." Underneath this in gray is "postage 15c."

First day cancellations may be obtained through the

Apollo Covers

Philatelic collectors are reminded that the increased U.S. postal rates may affect rates for covers submitted for cancellation on Apollo 15.

Navy recovery forces in the Atlantic and Pacific will process philatelic covers for the July 26 launch of Apollo 15. Task Force 140 and 130 will each accept a maximum of two covers from an individual collector.

Collectors should send pre-stamped, self-addressed envelopes (addresses in the lower right corner) to the appropriate coordinator to be received prior to July 2.

Covers should be sent to: Apollo 15 Covers, Task Force 140, Naval Air Station, Norfolk, Va. 23511 and Chief-in-Charge, (Apollo 15), Task Force 130, Navy Terminal Post Office, FPO San Francisco, Calif. 96610.

Polio Victim

Allison McKay of Arnie on CBS had polio at the age of 10 and was told she'd never walk again. Later, she was a featured dancer and singer in show rooms in Las Vegas, Reno and Lake Tahoe.

Coin Book Isn't Quite Indispensable

By JOE PLANAS
Special Writer

The promotion men who wrote the copy for the jacket of Norman M. Davis' The Complete Book of United States Coin Collection fibbed just a little.

They say his book is "an indispensable volume for the collector." No book is — and few people are.

Davis' book, however, is a good one, filled with interesting facts the beginner as well as the veteran coin collector can appreciate.

If you read carefully, you can find out that the gold dollar is the smallest U.S. coin ever. You can also learn that the silver dollar is the largest, that some U.S. commemoratives were melted down, making the remaining coins rare, and that a bushel of salt could be purchased in 1801 with a $2.50 gold piece.

The book contains the history of U.S. coinage from the first colonial pieces to the clad or "sandwich" type coins of the present day.

There is an interesting account of the $4 gold piece (or Stella), a detailed story concerning the 1836 and 1839 Gobrecht silver dollars and a history of U.S. $20 gold pieces.

There is a story about the sexy Miss Liberty (standing, of course) and how citizens frowned on the scantily-clad lady of the quarter, a list of mints government and private — and a collectors' vocabulary.

Davis tells about the Fugio cent, the Oregon mint that never struck coins, and odd medals and tokens.

Davis even gets around to mentioning Hadrian (the Roman emperor) and Hitler (the would-be German Superman) in his documented 356-page book.

Special Collection in McKelvie Room

Among the features of the Lincoln City Libraries system is the Nebraska Author Collection at the Bennett Martin Library, 14th and N.

Dedicated in September, 1968, the McKelvie Room houses the collection and other treasures. It was named for a noted Nebraska couple, Sam and Martha McKelvie. The late Mr. McKelvie was Nebraska governor from 1919 to 1923 and was publisher of the Nebraska Farmer magazine.

The Nebraska Author Collection attempts to bring together books written by Nebraskans. Efforts are being made to acquire all the works of such writers as Willa Cather, Weldon Kees and Mari Sandoz.

Many of the volumes are first editions and several autographed copies are among the collection.

The collection is not one that can be out on loan, but special materials in the room are made available on special request.

There are also circulating copies of the books in the special collection, however.

Furnishings in the McKelvie Room are from the former Lincoln home of Mrs. Martha Mc-Kelvie, who now lives in Scottsdale, Ariz. They are in the Baroque style of the Louis XIV period (1650-1700).

The library made the space available and Mr. and Mrs. Bennett S. Martin furnished the walls.

The McKelvie Room is open to the public 11 hours per week: 6-9 p.m. Thursday, 1-5 p.m. Saturdays and 1:30-5:30 p.m. Sundays.

'Here It Now: 60s' an Achievement

By AL RUDIS
(c) Chicago Sun-Times

The notes for I Can Hear It Now—The Sixties (Columbia) quote Edward R. Murrow, who called the first album in this sporadic series "A scrapbook for the ear."

The material in this particular scrapbook is so fascinating that just packaging it would have been enough. It has in addition excellent editing and connecting narration written by Fred W. Friendly and Walter Cronkite and read by Cronkite.

The three-record album becomes an essential historical document for the home of everyone who can stand to relive the '60s.

Stacking up this decade against the period of 1933-45 covered in the first I Can Hear It Now, the 1960s might even be considered a less depressing time, mainly because of one big positive series of events: The exploits in space. Other than this, the album is mostly a down trip, correctly characterized in the prologue by the background sounds of John F. Kennedy's funeral procession.

A few highlights: Ike's "Military-industrial complex" warning; Rachel Carson's early ecology pleas; Bay of Pigs; Berlin crisis; Cuban missile crisis; Yuri Gagarin and John Glenn's flights; President Kennedy's assassination; Harlem riots; Tonkin Gulf incident; Santo Domingo intervention; the big blackout; Watts, Detroit and Newark riots; six-day Middle East war; assassinations of Martin Luther King Jr. and Robert Kennedy; Chicago Democratic Convention; invasion of Czechoslovakia; Columbia University and Paris rebellions; moon landing; Woodstock and Chappaquiddick.

Little use is made of special effects, thus adding extra drama to the few occasions when they are employed, such as an overlapping of Czech and Russian commentary on the invasion.

The extremely intelligent organization of material is likewise unobtrusive, except where it's so good that it has to stick out. In the treatment of the Cuban Invasion, Friendly and Cronkite jump back to the 1960 presidential campaign, when Kennedy was taking a tough line against Castro and Nixon was cautioning against foolish invasion notions.

From the Berlin crisis, there is a jump forward to Kennedy's famous "Berliner Speech" two years later. And an excellent treatment of the Tonkin Gulf incident starts with recordings of the 1964 debate, including Sen. Wayne Morse's unheeding warning, then jumps forward to 1970 and Lyndon Johnson's defense of the resolution and J. W. Fulbright's rebuttal.

The few mistakes in the album are of a minor sort, such as dropping Mrs. Malcolm X's description of her husband's assassination on the record but not in the notes.

Also the resignation of De Gaulle is reported using two metaphors and never explained further, leaving the impression through the context that he resigned during the Paris uprising.

The album is fast-moving and never boring. Its one big lack is visuals to go with the sounds. Now that they say, video cassettes are on the way, I'm looking forward to a series of I Can See It Now that will surpass even this fine achievement.

Camera Club Show at Library

The Lincoln Camera Club will present the best of its members' work at its spring salon May 20-June 18 at the Bennett Martin Library, 14th and N.

Participants in the exhibition by the 50-member club will show 33 black and white and color prints, judged by the Topeka Camera Club, and 160 color slides. They will hang in the library's second floor area.

The selections hung are pre-judged and awarded by other camera clubs in the 9-state NAC circuit — the North Central Camera Clubs Council according to LaVerne Duemey, soon-to-be-installed vice president of the Lincoln club.

Ft. Hays Session

Hays, Kan. —Authors, editors and representatives of publishing companies will lead a children's literature conference for teachers and librarians at Fort Hays State College. Directed by Mrs. Donna Harsh of the FHS education, the department conference will be June 14-18. Among the speakers will be Emily Neville, author of the Newbery Award book, It's Like This, Cat, and Jessie Voils, author of Summer on the Salt Fork, a William Allen White list book.

Dan Speedlin (left), Tom Sattler and Kathy Babcock are helping start a new Lincoln High tradition.

One-Act Plays At Lincoln High

Among traditions being established during Lincoln High School's centennial observance is the addition of a spring drama. Three one-act plays will be presented at 7:30 p.m. Thursday in the Lincoln High auditorium.

The Man in the Bowler Hat will be directed by junior Bob Thurber. The cast includes Janet Behrens, Russ Harris, Mike Harroun, Sue Adams, Pat Wieggirt and Rob Wilken.

Aria de Capa, by Edna St. Vincent Milley, involves an absurd plot mocking the classical concept of lovers. Parts will be played by Dan Speedlin, Kathy Babcock, Henry Hall and Gregg Harm.

Connie Schuelke, Harold Johnson, Mary Raymer and John Stevens will play the parts in a cut from The Bald Soprano by Ionesco.

New Medium

Hollywood (UPI) — David Dortort, producer of Bonanza and High Chaparral, announced plans to enter motion pictures with Beggar in Jerusalem.

Naturalists

To Hear Iowans

Mr. and Mrs. Fitzhugh Diggs, farmer-naturalists from Hamburg, Ia., will give an illustrated lecture entitled Wild Flowers and Their Companions at a meeting of the Audubon Naturalist Club at the auditorium of Morrill Hall, 14th and U, at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday. Audubon Naturalist meetings are open to all interested.

NU Band Will Play 3 Brass Concertino

University of Nebraska Collegiate Band will play its spring concert at 7:30 p.m. Thursday on the lawn in front of Kimball Recital Hall, 11th and R. with Prof. Jack Snider conducting.

Among the numbers in the free public program will be Concertino for Three Brass written by Floyd E. Werle and featuring foxtrot, lullaby and Greek dance sections. A highly technical piece, it was written for the U.S. Air Force Band as a trio for trumpet, trombone and tuba. The NU trio will be Laurie Frink of Holdrege, trumpet; Bill Buntain of Auburn, trombone and Steve Forbes of Ralston, tuba.

Lester Monts, a graduate assistant from Little Rock, Ark., will conduct the band's performance of J. Francis McBeth's Masque, a rhythmic overture, and Old Comrads, an old German march.

Also on the program will be The Thunderer by John Philip Sousa, and Lady of Spain. Theme and Rock Out by John Cacavas, features the contemporary sound of electric guitars. The program closes with Cornhusker Medley, an arrangement of University of Nebraska songs by an N.U. graduate, Robert Nelson, who arranges for the Cornhusker Marching Band.

'Elijah' Tonight

Noted baritone William Warfield and the University of Nebraska Choral Union will present Mendelssohn's oratorio Elijah tonight in the NU coliseum. This free public program will also feature three soloists from the School of Music, Raymond Miller and Lorraine Gibb and Kathryn Harney.

Art and Music at Southeast

Southeast High School, 37th and Van Dorn, will have its spring arts festival today. The free public program begins at 2:30 with displays of art work

Carillon Concert

The First-Plymouth Congregational Church Carillonners Guild will present their annual concert at 4 p.m. next Sunday in the church courtyard. The seven-member group, directed by Raymond Johnson, will present the free public concert.

Connie Stevens will be a regular on the Music Hall summer series

John Zei.

Judith Allen Recital Here Monday at 8

Judith Allen, an affiliate artist at Doane College in Crete, will present a free public recital of songs by American composers at 8 p.m. Monday at First-Plymouth Congregational Church, 20th and D.

A graduate of Northwestern University, soprano Allen made her debut as Musetta in La Boheme with the North Shore Friends of Opera in New York

Judith Allen

City. She has worked with the Goldovsky Opera Institute, appeared extensively on television and received a Martha Baird Rockefeller study grant.

The Affiliate Artist Program permits the artist to be a professional resource person on a college campus while pursuing her performing career.

Miss Allen says she has chosen American songs for Monday night's program because she feels more at home with music in her own language and is better able to communicate through it. Her piano accompanist for this program will be Linda Grosland:

Church to Present Britten's Musical Version of Flood

Noye's Fludde, a musical interpretation of Noah and the Ark, will be presented at 7:30 tonight in the First Presbyterian Church sanctuary, 17th and F.

Under the musical direction of Russell Blackmer Jr., all of the choirs of the church will be taking part.

University of Nebraska Prof. John Zei will sing the lead part of Noye. Lois Meyers will sing the part of Mrs. Noye and Robert C. Larson will be the voice of God.

The various choirs will portray the animals and birds of the Ark. Also included will be an orchestra, organ, piano, recorders, handbells, bugles and percussion.

Noye's Fludde was written by Benjamin Britten. The English composer aimed to give children an opportunity to participate with adults in a miracle play with contemporary music. Britten retained the early English spelling. The first performance was in 1958.

Stage direction for tonight's performance is by Wesleyan Prof. Henry Blanke Jr.; stage setting and scenic design are by George Wolcott and Oliver Hoffman; costumes are by Phyllis Blanke, and lighting is by Don Ellis.

Boys Choir Will Sing Tuesday Night

The Lincoln Boys Choir, directed by Randall McEwen, will present a concert at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday in the East High auditorium, 70th and A.

Proceeds from the program, which is open to the public, will be used to finance future Boys Choir trips.

In addition to the choir, a percussion ensemble from Lincoln High and an instrumental quartet from Northeast High will be on the program. Duane Nichols will assist with the choir direction.

Senior choir members will be recognized at the concert.

Organized in 1953 as a Saturday morning musical activity, the membership in this 120-member group is by audition. The boys come from grades 7 through 12. Tuesday's program:

Rock Program at East High

"Expressions . . . the story of our lives, put to music" will be presented in concert form at 8 p.m. Thursday in the East High auditorium, 70th and A.

This public happening is a show of rock music written and produced by East High students, according to vocal instructor Jon Peterson, who terms the show "a gas."

The five settings, which includes 25-popular tunes, are entitled Taking You Up, Thoughts of Love, Getting Down to Living, Smiles and Loneliness and To End—but Begin Anew.

In addition to the instrumental renditions of the popular tunes by an eight-piece student rock group, the East High stage band will open the show with three numbers. Choreography and a light show will also be included.

LHS Orchestra, Choir Perform

The Lincoln High orchestra and choir will present a Vesper concert at 2:30 p.m. today in the school auditorium, 22nd and J. This free public program is under the direction of Orville Voss and Ivan Caldwell.

The orchestra will play Mozart's Overture to the Magic Flute, the first movement of Hanson's Symphony No. 2 and Whear's Lancaster Overture.

The Choir will sing Pergolesi's The Magnificat.

Displays, Music at Pius High

"An Evening of Creativity" will begin at 8 p.m. Monday as Pius X High School, 60th and A.

The home economics, industrial arts and art departments will have displays. In addition the music department will have this band concert:

The Futility of War

Don't Ask Me If I Love.
By Amos Kollek; M. Evans Co.

Don't ask me if I liked Don't Ask Me If I Love.

This first novel by a 22-year-old Israeli (who happens to be the son of the mayor of Jerusalem) is not only highly readable and deeply moving, but has all the stunning impact of a bomb explosion.

I don't think I'll ever quite forget it or what I think young Kollek is saying on behalf of himself and the millions like him who question the values of their parents and the usefulness of war as a means to any ends at all.

Assaf Ryke, the novel's central character, though not the hero type, presents the attitude of one part of Israel's youth — those who look at the futility of killing, seeing one after another of their friends laid to rest, killed in the war.

This skepticism about the utility of war and the value system by which the older generation lives is surfacing in more than one spot on the globe. Indeed, Kollek will find sympathetic readers in many countries, not least of all right here in the United States.

What may seem surprising is that such a divergence of views on life and death, war and peace, national security and religious emphasis, can exist in such a homogeneous country as Israel.

That it does exist — that young people are questioning the sense of it all — poses questions about the future of the Middle East conflict. What will happen when a generation with no living memory of World War II's persecution of the Jews assumes power in Israel?

Young people immersed in the violence and urgency of war all their lives must view it differently from their parents, who regret but recall something else, something they deem still worse.

In Israel, it's the specter of the concentration camps that haunts the parents, the shadow of death in war that haunts their sons.

The gulf of understanding between generations with vastly different life histories is a tragedy in the making. The parents see their children as the hope for national survival and the triumph of all that is right, while the children themselves, asking what good can come of any effort, see their country destroying their contemporaries — to them, all that matters.

Don't Ask Me If I Love is the winner of the first M. Evans Fiction Award and it sets a demanding precedent.

It is the kind of novel that has human appeal and enough sentimentality to be good on the screen. Tying it all together is a plot with enough intellectual meat to justify producing it.

I'll buy the first ticket in Lincoln.

Wheeling and Dealing

Welcome to Our Conglomerate — You're Fired! By Isadore Barmash; Delacorte.

Most of us ordinary mortals have stood in awe at the huge financial wheelings and dealings that produced recent years' spate of large corporate mergers.

But there is more to it all than that; there is also a human, even egotistical, side. Isadore Barmash, financial writer for the New York Times, has done a good job of bringing out both sides so that the general public can get at them.

He is also a master at eliciting (or making up) beautiful lines. One of the best is from an executive in an acquired company:

Isadore Barmash

"We got the mushroom treatment. Right after the acquisition we were kept in the dark. Then they covered us with manure. Then they cultivated us. After Case History. By Benjamin Siegel; McKay.

Hypochondriacs need not apply—at least not those of the body.

This book is not the case history of a physical ailment, but of a psychiatrist, Dr. Max Norway. As he recalls informal case histories of his intern past and compiles the case histories of his present patient load, more is revealed about him than about his patients.

And therein lies the truth of Benjamin Siegel's novel: that psychiatrists are not the larger-than-life, uninvolved, note-taking machines with all the answers that television and cinema have so often made them out to be.

They are, Siegel seems to say, more like Max Norway: sometimes confused, worried, anxious and racked by doubt. Unlike Max Norway, they occasionally kill themselves, having the highest suicide rate of any group of medical practitioners.

Torn by his inability to love his that they let us stew a while. And finally they canned us."

Despite the frequently light tone, there are enough history, detail and financial acumen to interest even the knowledgeable. Yet the most noteworthy message of this readable book is that, as Barmash says, "mergers are not made because the numbers add up but because the people do."

"The emotions, the chemistry, the gut reaction of the protagonists are what bind the tie."

For both insiders and outsiders, however, Barmash's book — his second on the business scene — is worth a look.

—Scott Hooper

wife or any woman, though he desperately wants to, Max nevertheless manages to cut through a bundle of neuroses and a fair sprinkling of psychoses in memory and at his bucolic practice.

His patients, regrettably, are the melodramatic caricatures which fill the daytime television screen.

The failure cases are nearly spectacular. The sickest are seen jumping off buildings, overdosing barbiturates or rape-murdering cute little girls. No wonder Max becomes depressed.

His successes are the milder neurotic-next-door variety — the sub rosa transvestite who handles it tastefully, the woman who longs for a masterful hand instead of the mouse she married.

The question, it seems, is What kind of therapeutic neurotic is Max Norway? And the bigger question is What kind of neurotics are the people who read such vivid and lacklusterly spectacular novels?

—Kandra Hahn

Is It The Way It Was?

Potatoes Are Cheaper. By Max Shulman; Doubleday.

Although it has been on the best-seller list, one wonders who's buying Potatoes Are Cheaper.

It has this going for it: you can read it at one sitting, which is more and more important for the hassle known as life. It is written in an easy conversational style: you are there. And in its own way, it is funny.

Max Shulman could hardly miss on the funny part, bringing in an unbeatable combination in which to hang his laughs — sex, Jewishness, the Great Depression and life on campus.

But the sex is crude, vulgar and of the steering-wheel-in-the-back variety. The Jewishness and the Great Depression are terribly overdone, and life on campus is just barely mentioned as a necessity.

While it is said that every man's laugh is someone else's pain, Shulman pulls out all the stops. Nothing is sacred to him: sexual impotence, physical handicaps, old age and senility, national origin or religion.

His exaggerations of a brother-in-law who does a pantomime of Tarzan the first time he sees a toilet and a cousin who turns his thwarted sex drive into poetry are really too much, and after the first 10 pages, you say to yourself, "I can't go on," but you do — and even find yourself laughing.

Who's buying Potatoes Are Cheaper?

Maybe the college crowd, who are used to the bawdy words and now have the evidence that sex on campus is not all that fresh.

Or maybe their parents, who remember when it was.

Eat Well...and Lose That Fat!

AN EFFECTIVE PLAN TO LOSE UGLY FAT

NOW...LABORATORY SCIENCE HAS PERFECTED A TINY PRE-MEAL TABLET WITH A PLAN THAT LETS YOU ENJOY FOODS YOU CHOOSE

This unique formula—now in easy-to-use tablet form—with the X-11 Reducing Plan helps lose excessive weight, reduce inches. Don't go hungry. Eat 3 sensibly square meals a day while you slim down!

So you want to lose 5, 10, 25 or more pounds of excessive weight? . . . Here now is an extraordinary easy figure-slimming Plan that offers you a way to get rid of unsightly, superfluous fat you're carrying—without strenuous exercises . . . and, most important of all, without missing a meal.

EAT AND LOSE THAT EXCESSIVE WEIGHT. You can satisfy your appetite and peel off those extra pounds, too. Now, with the X-11 Plan, you can remove pounds and inches from thighs, neck, legs, waist — all OVER — without ever going hungry — and stabilize reduced weight at a level you've always dreamed of holding as you follow the Plan. While you eat satisfying meals, no longer will you be the prisoner of the overeating habit, because with the X-11 Plan, you eat less and want less. So you lose weight . . . while you eat well.

NO EASIER REDUCING METHOD EVER DEVELOPED

1. COUNTERACTS HUNGER

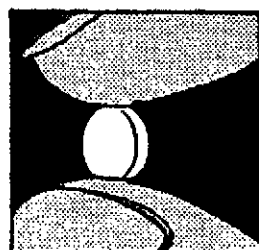

Take one of these tablets a half-hour or so before your regular meals. It combines a pure vegetable extract that has no calories, and quickly starts acting to provide the feeling of a fuller, satisfied, contented stomach. You eat 3 satisfying balanced meals—eat what you want, but eat less.

2. ACTS AS APPETITE APPEASER

Part of the secret of this method is a unique ingredient that acts as a beneficial appetite appeaser, which puts a "brake" on your cravings for sweets, candy, pastries, rich gravies, High-Fat/High-Calorie foods—everything. It helps you conduct a kind of psychological warfare with yourself as you break some bad old eating habits you probably thought you were stuck with forever.

3. FORTIFIED WITH VITAMINS, MINERALS

Important to those who feel it their lot to feel jumpy, jittery, or fagged out when dieting. Your daily supply now combines a whole spectrum of vitamins and minerals, including: Vitamin A, Vitamin B1, Vitamin B2, Vitamin B6, Vitamin C, Niacinamide, Vitamin E, Vitamin B12—all so important to helping prevent these nutritional deficiencies.

SATISFACTION GUARANTEED OR MONEY BACK

You have nothing to lose but pounds and inches! You must be 100% delighted with results after taking your first package of the X-11 Reducing Plan, or simply return the Empty Package for an immediate refund—no questions asked. "Good Luck Is Coming Your Way"

Greetings from Horseshoe Bend:

We invite you and your family to enjoy a FREE vacation in the Southern Ozarks. A marvelous fun-filled vacationland. A wonderful change of scenery—all sorts of fun things to do for all ages—soak up some good old Ozark sunshine—breathe the clean-fresh mountain air—RELAX. It's beautiful, it's different, it's exciting.

Horseshoe Bend is a nationally recognized development of twelve thousand acres of unspoiled natural beauty. Our elected democratic government lends stability to the new community. Distant vistas of rolling, forested hills and deep lush green valleys will enchant you. Sparkling lakes and the picturesque Strawberry River provide wonderful boating, canoeing, swimming and fishing—swimming also in the big, clear, cool Club pool. You'll find the golfing great on our sun-swept course—every stroke in the book and a challenge to pro and duffer alike. Or you may want to go horseback riding over woodland trails once familiar to the Caddos and Cherokees. For the nature lover, the bird watcher and the "rock hound", this is indeed a paradise.

Select the two FREE nights lodging you want reserved right now and mail back the attached postage paid reservation request card. Your reservation will be confirmed by mail. We ask only that both heads of the family meet your assigned representative who will take you on a scenic and informative tour of our new community. Guest passes for FREE lodging (being validated after arrival) and Frontierland are included here. Be sure to bring them with you. Other passes will be presented to you before and upon your arrival providing FREE use of our many recreational facilities and the nightly entertainment at the Club House.

Please advise us soon if you plan to accept our invitation, and we will send you additional interesting information.

Sincerely yours,

HANDY TIPS... SAVE THIS!
HOW TO USE A PAINT ROLLER

1. Dip the roller into the paint and work it up and down the tray. It should be full but not drippy. Don't roll onto the surface too fast. This makes the paint fall in a mist.

2. Roll over your brushed "cut-in" stroke as close to the corner or woodwork as you can without scraping it with the end of your roller.

Remember... keep your roller full of paint at all times and always use a minimum of pressure on the roller when applying the paint.

WALTER SCOTT'S Personality Parade

Want the facts? Want to learn the truth about prominent personalities? Want informed opinion? Write Walter Scott, Parade, 733 3rd Ave., New York, N.Y. 10017. Your full name will be used unless otherwise requested. Volume of mail received makes personal replies impossible.

Q. I have read in several Negro magazines that Thomas Jefferson had a large family by a slave named Sally Hemings. Is there any truth to that story? I thought that Jefferson was a most moral man.—D T L, Lynchburg, Va.

A. Most Jefferson biographers are overprotective in discussing Jefferson's love life, generally reject his paternity of Sally Hemings' children. Sally Hemings was a half sister to Jefferson's dead wife, Martha Wayles.

Jefferson was 39 when his wife died. To expect a rugged, healthy man to abandon sex at that age is most unrealistic. Jefferson surely had an affair with a married woman, Maria Cosway, in Paris (see Helen Duprey Bullock's book, My Head and My Heart, a Little History of Thomas Jefferson and Maria Cosway), and he most probably sired half a dozen octoroon children by Sally Hemings, a slave at his Monticello home. One of America's most thorough and readable biographers, Fawn Brodie, author of No Man Knows My History (Joseph Smith); Thaddeus Stevens, Scourge of the South; and The Devil Drives (Sir Richard Burton), is writing an intimate history of Thomas Jefferson. Including his relationship with Sally Hemings.

One of the most revealing documents pertaining thereto appeared in an obscure Ohio newspaper, the Pike County Republican, March 13, 1873. Madison Hemings, one of Sally Hemings' sons, wrote therein that his mother had borne Thomas Jefferson several children, several of whom were so light-skinned that they could and did "pass" as white.

Q. How many men in the U.S. Senate grow a beard?—Newt Inglis, St Paul, Minn.

A. At this writing, only one, Sen. Phil Hart (D., Mich.).

Q. Who said, "None but myself ever did me any harm"?—Michelle Wilkinson, Quincy, Ill.

A. Napoleon Bonaparte.

Q. On April 7, 1971, President Nixon told the American public: "Tonight I can report that Vietnamization has succeeded." If that's the case and the incursion into Laos proves that the South Vietnamese can look after themselves, why won't Nixon bring all our troops home now?—Frederick Lee, Philadelphia, Pa.

A. The truth, of course, is that Vietnamization is not that much of a success.

RAQUEL WELCH AND HUSBAND PATRICK CURTIS

Q. Raquel Welch—I understand she's given her husband Pat Curtis the air. Is he going back to Our Gang comedies in which he once acted?—F.T., San Diego, Calif.

A. Raquel and her manager-husband are temporarily estranged, but a reconciliation is always possible.

Q. What's happened to Dave Garroway who used to be the master of ceremonies on The Today Show?—Pauline Burke, Greenwich, Conn.

A. Garroway is a disc jockey on radio station KFI in Los Angeles. He quit The Today Show ten years ago after his wife died of a sleeping pill overdose.

Q. Is it true that Sen. Edward Kennedy's secretary was robbed and raped by a man who accosted her in broad daylight in Washington, D.C.?—Rita Yates, New Smyrna Beach, Fla.

A. Unfortunately true.

Q. Now that Canada's Prime Minister Trudeau has gotten married, who takes over as political Playboy of the Western World?—Ruth Braxton, Baltimore, Md.

A. Good possibility: Helmut Schmidt, 52, West Germany's handsome Defense Minister who receives countless proposals of marriage via mail each day.

Q. How come Sean Connery is back playing James Bond in films again? Supposedly he promised that he was through with them.—Anne Lundberg, Terre Haute, Ind.

A. Connery agreed to star in Diamonds Are Forever providing his salary of $1,250,000 was paid directly to his favorite charity, The Scottish International Education Trust. It is so being paid in part by Howard Hughes who is helping to finance the film in Las Vegas although he himself is in the Bahamas.

Q. Is it true that no insurance company will insure a film in which Gen. Moshe Dayan's son Assaf plays a role?—Joanne Callinicos, Los Angeles, Calif.

A. Assaf Dayan, son of the Israeli general, is reportedly finding it difficult to obtain film roles in Europe. Insurance companies fear he may be kidnapped or harmed by Arab partisans.

Summer Olympic Jobs

Want to see the summer Olympics and earn your way, too?

The organizing committee of the 1972 summer Olympics to be held in Munich, Germany, needs 27,000 helpers, male and female, for the period Aug. 15-Sept. 11, 1972.

Many of the jobs require a knowledge of foreign languages: hosts and hostesses for the teams, ushers in the stadia, telephone operators and typists, usherettes and maids of all work.

Also sought for employment are 1000 messengers, 500 ticket inspectors, a cleaning crew of 2000.

If you are interested, write to Organisations-Komitee Referat 9A, D8000 Munich 13, Saarstr. 7, W. Germany.

Most Likely To Succeed

The firstborn son who enjoys a close relationship with his father is more likely to succeed than his younger siblings.

U.S. Navy psychiatrist Dr. Roger F. Reinhardt reported this conclusion from a study of successful Navy jet pilots. Dr. Reinhardt learned that firstborn sons who experienced a warm father-son relationship during their pre-college years scored consistently higher in courage, personal initiative and daring than others who evidenced paternal deprivation.

As factors in their success, these elite pilots report close personal relations with their fathers in both work and play. Three-quarters of them regard their father as the more significant parent.

And the mother? Dr. Mary Rothbart of Palo Alto, Calif., reported recently to the American Psychological Association that mothers are more concerned with the achievement of their first daughter than son. In a study of 56 mothers of 5-year-old children with younger siblings, Dr. Rothbart found that the mothers "exhibited greater pressure for achievement and greater anxious intrusion into the performance of the firstborn, accentuated when the firstborn was a girl."

The reason? "One possibility," Dr. Rothbart suggests, "is that the mother most closely identifies with the firstborn girl."

"The mother may also feel something of an attraction toward her firstborn son and that would temper her behavior toward him, and a sense of rivalry toward the firstborn girl," Dr. Rothbart added.

Conclusion: the No. 1 son is more likely to succeed, the No. 1 daughter more likely to be coddled.

Joint Effort

The high school students of Santana, Calif., are working together to build a better—house.

Santana High School has been in the construction business for 13 years. Since 1958 students in the construction, craft and vocational courses have collaborated in a joint house-building venture.

The drafting class provides the design for the house, electronics is in charge of the wiring, business education handles the book-keeping and accounts. Even the girls in homemaking are brought in on the project, as interior decorators.

Where the students lack expertise, such as in plumbing, a visiting expert is brought in to demonstrate the proper procedures.

A local bank provides a loan to cover the construction costs of the house, which is built on campus and then transferred to a permanent site. The bank also guarantees a mortgage to the purchaser.

Other Summer Jobs

Two factors will most determine the winner in the Presidential election of 1972: the domestic economy and the Vietnamese war.

Richard Nixon, aware of that fact, is determined to heat up the economy and cool down the war.

To stimulate the economy he has asked Congress for approximately $64 million to provide 576,000 temporary jobs for youngsters this summer.

The unemployment rate for teenagers has been running at about 17 percent nationwide this year. It generally increases when school lets out; summer jobs are the well-known antidote for urban unrest and riots.

If Congress appropriates the money, thousands of teenagers, black and white, will earn a minimum of $1.60 an hour for nine weeks of work this summer, filling neighborhood youth corps jobs and Federal office positions.

BANKER LUNDBORG LENDS A SYMPATHETIC EAR TO STUDENTS.

Kind Bankers

Idiot students and "street people" may burn and stone community banks, charging them with all the sins of our economy, but a study based on 1966-67 tax returns of nearly a million companies in 42 industries reveals that banks were the most generous contributors to various charities; 14,000 of them contributed a total of $45 million (2.1 percent of earnings before taxes) to various charities.

The automotive industry, on the other hand, through 1600 companies, contributed a total of $14 million (0.3 percent of profits).

Invariably, bank managers are community-minded, charity-oriented, civic-conscious individuals. Louis Lundborg, 65, for example, retired chairman of the board of the Bank of America, several of whose branches have been burned down and destroyed, is frequently seen communicating with youngsters, hearing them out and conducting open forums.

One of the first bank executives to speak out against the war in Southeast Asia, Lundborg has pointed out many times that students should not blame banks for all the ills and inequities of society. He has explained that banks are probably kinder to students and more thoughtful of their needs than any other branch of business, providing them with thousands of scholarships and loans at 3.5 percent.

Walter Matthau plays a high-style, bon vivant millionaire opposite Elaine May in "A New Leaf." In the old Hollywood days, with his looks, he would have been cast as a chicken plucker.

Walter Matthau: A New Kind of Romantic Leading Man

by Lloyd Shearer

HOLLYWOOD, CALIF.

For the poor, the underprivileged, and the undereducated in this country there have long been two traditional avenues to monetary success: sports and show business.

No one with money in his background ever becomes a professional prizefighter, and with few exceptions that statement holds for youngsters who aspire to screen stardom.

Until recently most Hollywood stars were children of poverty who clawed their way through the show business jungle. In many cases—Loretta Young, Betty Hutton, Marilyn Monroe—they were also children of desertion whose fathers had simply walked out on their families. In each of these instances it was a strong mother who through her painful struggle to support her offspring, inspired them to make something of themselves.

A contemporary case in point is

Walter Matthau, an actor whose childhood poverty has caused him so much trauma that today, despite years of success, he is seemingly obsessed with the fear of failure and its concomitant loss of money. "Just describe me as cautious," he suggests.

Should the name Matthau fail to strike a responsive chord in your memory, be advised that this tall (6 feet 3), lean (160 pounds), beady-eyed actor who claims to be 47—a claim he has made for the last three years—is the star of such films as The Fortune Cookie, A Guide for the Married Man, The Odd Couple, Candy, Hello, Dolly!, Cactus Flower, A New Leaf, Plaza Suite, and Kotch, the last two as yet unreleased.

Moreover, he is wanted by practically every still-functioning producer in this depressed community, because he is a consummate actor, equally at home in comedy or melodrama. He can play any part and has: a leering Air Force general in Candy, a penny-pinching shopkeeper in Hello, Dolly!, a loutish sportswriter in The Odd Couple, a society playboy in A New Leaf, and a 72-year-old widower who lives with and befriends a pregnant teenager in Kotch.

Jack Lemmon directs

Kotch, incidentally, marks the directorial debut of his good friend, Jack Lemmon, whom he describes as "a fantastic director because he has a most unique ability to communicate with the broad spectrum of personalities on the scene, a man with a magnificent command of all the integral parts of a script. As long as recorded history has made its presence, Kotch will be a great picture."

From time to time Matthau talks in stentorian tones, employing a semi-formal vocabulary as if he were Walter Annenberg, the U.S. Ambassador to Great Britain, or as if he were reading aloud from a high school term paper. Once a funny thought strikes him, however, he lapses into an informal monologue.

"You want to know how poor I was as a kid? I'll tell you how poor I was. I am a product of the Lower East Side ghetto of New York City. Reminds me of the story of Maureen Stapleton and Sono Osato (two well-known New York stage actresses). One day Sono said to Maureen, 'Have you ever been poor?'"

'Have I ever been poor?' Maureen repeated. 'I was so poor I was made in Japan.'

Life on Lower East Side

"I was forged on the Lower East Side," Matthau continues. "My father Milton was a Russian Jewish immigrant from Kiev. And my mother—she's still alive; my father is not—even today the sound of my mother's voice, loud, commanding and domineering sends me to the nearest liquor cabinet for relief."

"We had no money when I was a child. My father came to this country in 1906. He had no skills, no ability to earn a living. No trade, no business, no money, no knowledge of the language. He was a sensitive man. I gathered this from the few meetings I had with him was six, eight, ten. He found a highly emotional and domineering wife. My mother originally came from Armenia and they met and married in New York. Once they had the children came, and then the scene became too much for her. He left. And then it was up to my mother to the arduous task of scrubbing, cleaning, cooking without the light to do it. I lived in two dark dingy rooms on the lower East Side. My brother and I were in the bedroom. My mother was in the kitchen. Talk about a traumatic childhood. I sure had one. I learned the value of a buck."

Matthau "learned very early the value of a buck," why and how did he get into one of the most compulsive professions in show business? How within a two-week period, bet almost $185,000, which, he took me six long years to pay you ask him that question, he looks for a few seconds, runs his hand across his marvelously mobile face and explains, "I wish to hell I had been at Las Vegas years ago. I was a fiend for betting on sports events. I still am, I bet $20 a race. I had the gambling disease. I was addicted. I've written a book on the subject. I still don't know how it got to me. Maybe because my first marriage was a disaster. I got a divorce at the age of 30 for the $183,000. That's how much I was trying to escape from or something. I had to go to drama school, the workshop of the New School for Social Research in New York City.

That was after World War II. I got $90 a month on the GI bill. I liked the romantic life of the impoverished student. Then there was Madison Square Garden, where they staged plenty of sporting events. Maybe that environment added to my gambling affinity. I don't know and I don't want to dig into my conscience and find out. I'm not all that secure. I'm just happy that today I can control my betting.

'Money hurts'

"I go to the track because it's emotionally a very specialized and charged place. Emotions surface very easily there because money is involved. Money hurts and most people are money neurotics. I certainly am. And the losing and winning and wagering of money and having your immediate life in the balance, it's very interesting to watch.

"Most people don't recognize me. I don't look like an actor. I could be anyone from a men's room attendant to a guy from Erie, Pa. I try to live the life of a guy who earns maybe $150 a week. I go to the grocery. I go to the drug store. I walk around town. I get on a bus. Sometimes I get strange looks. Someone will come over and say, 'Aren't you Walter Matthau, the movie star?' And I'll say, 'Yes, I am.' And they'll say, 'What are you doing here?' And I say, 'Why shouldn't I be here?'

"They'll say, 'You must be rich.' I say, 'I'm not rich. I have enough money to hire a limousine if that's what you mean, but I would rather ride in a bus. I like it better.' And some people say, 'Gee, that guy is cheap. He uses the bus.'"

A complex man

In truth, Matthau is a generous, intelligent, good-natured, affable, articulate but highly complex man who confounds reporters by interspersing his statements with a mixture of inseparable fiction and non-fiction, both serious and funny.

At various times he has described himself as "a sort of Ukrainian Cary Grant . . . a guy who came up the hard way . . . my mother Rose used to say that no one would want to see a shy, gangling, pimply boy from the ghetto. 'Walter,' she used to say. 'Become a writer, then nobody has to see you' . . . but as a kid I had a good voice. People always said that I didn't sound as though I were from New York, although I was brought up on New York radio speech. I used to listen to the guys on radio, guys I remember were Milton Cross and David Ross, the announcers. For a long time I had a hard 'R', a Mid-

Matthau is married to Carol Marcus Saroyan (Aug. 21, 1959). He met Carol, divorced from writer William Saroyan, when he appeared in the play, "Will Success Spoil Rock Hunter?" She had a small role.

Matthau and wife Carol and son Charlie, 8, live in a large New England-type early-American furnished house in Pacific Palisades, Calif.

Matthau was previously married (1948 to 1958) to Grace Johnson, a New York actress. They had two children, David and Jenny, shown above.

looking stupid or constipated, and the audience will believe it if the guy is a good enough actor."

In' the legitimate theater, however, where he got his start (after two years in a CCC camp in Montana, another year as a WPA recreation instructor in New York, and four years in the Air Force), Matthau was always regarded as a character actor.

Says an agent who knows him well: "Twenty years ago who ever thought that Walter Matthau would hit it big in Hollywood? No one. Handsome he was not. Sex appeal he had very little. But natural talent he had a lot. Over the years he developed into a fine character actor, but he didn't look like a leading man used to look. He looked as if someone had hit him on the nose with a bat.

"I remember when he was married to his first wife, Grace Geraldine Johnson, an actress he met at the New School. It wasn't easy. They had two kids, a boy David, now almost 18, and a girl Jenny, 15.

Had to hustle

"Walter had to hustle to make a living. He played everything everywhere. Shakespeare, summer stock, Broadway. Most of the plays on Broadway lasted three weeks. He worked in television, anything to scrape together a living.

"As I recall it was Elia Kazan who first brought him out to Hollywood for a role in A Face in the Crowd. I think it was in 1957. A year later Walter got divorced. Then he began going with Carol Marcus who'd been married to the writer, William Saroyan. Carol and Walter got married, and today they live in a big house in the Pacific Palisades in California. They have a son Charlie, 8. Walter drives a 300 Mercedes. He has his own corporation, Walcar Inc. (Walter & Carol). He's got it made.

"Hollywood treats him as a superstar. He gets a percentage of the gross. In Cactus Flower he earned over a million. But he still remembers the old days of his genteel poverty, and he remains excessively cautious."

When I asked Matthau if he agreed with the appraisal that he was by nature excessively cautious, he quickly replied, "Not by nature but by experience. I've been poor and I've been rich. Rich is better."

n "The Fortune Cookie" Matthau is ambulance-chasing lawyer. He claims his real name is Matuschanskayayaasky, drama teacher changed it to Matthau.

Matthau plays three roles in Neil Simon's upcoming "Plaza Suite." In this segment he and Lee Grant are parents of a reluctant bride.

LIFE SPLINTERING?

What's behind today's faltering families? Apathy? Permissiveness? Perhaps even your family feels its role weakening.

So many families pour from the home—and scatter. No wonder they lose touch! Life centers on the individual. Children are pushed to excel. Parents are caught between each child's many activities and their own.

Such self-centered individuals find it far more difficult to live together. Tensions mount. Family members flounder, each too proud, too defensive, even too bewildered, to reach out to the others. Disappointments and frustrations grow, as the generation gap—the family gap—widens.

The plight of the family has become a matter of national concern. Can your family counteract the influences pulling it apart?

Our new booklet can help a busy, active family communicate. It is realistic. It faces family faults and failures. But it can also help you keep the family strength, the deep sense of belonging, every individual needs. It has down-to-earth ideas—from the father of eleven children. The booklet's free; send for it. Let the whole family read it.

VALUES What does the average American consider the most important factor in his life?

Work. So claims a report recently issued by the National Economic Development Council in Great Britain.

Researchers polled 1200 U.S. scientists and engineers, then reported that Americans equate success in life with job success.

"To simplify grossly," the report contends, "he (the American) may be said to live in order to work. On the other hand, the Englishman does not in general give the job such pride of place in the scheme of things.

"He works in order that he may live, but his work is not in many cases even the major activity of his life."

POPULATION FORECAST Twenty years from today the Red Chinese will have more than one billion people.

By the year 2000, India will also have at least one billion.

The Soviet Union, the third most populous country in the world with an estimated 250 million, will increase its population to 316 million by 1990 and to 329 million by the year 2000.

Fourth-ranking United States, with an estimated 204 million people will have 252 million by 1985.

These projections by the United Nations' population experts are from the latest issue of the U.N. monthly statistical bulletin.

The experts also predict that Dutchmen will replace Swedes as those people in the world who live longest. For the period 1965-70 newborn Swedish babies had the longest life expectancy: 74.5 years. Dutch babies had the second longest life expectancy: 74 years. By 1980-85, according to the statistical bulletin, life expectancy in the Netherlands will be 75.9 years, and in Sweden

Meanwhile the life expectancy figures will also rise in other countries. In Red China they will increase from 50 to 59 years, in India from 48 to 57, in the Soviet Union from 70.3 to 72, and in the U.S.A. from 70.3 to 71.2 years.

THE FIFTH DIMENSION: A BIG-MONEY ACT AT FESTIVALS.

LUCRATIVE SUMMER

Summer used to be the off-season for actors and performers, with Broadway staffed by second- and third-stringers and television programmed with reruns.

Not so any longer. The summer festival circuit, of relatively recent origin, now offers stars and singers rich and easy pickings.

A top-name performer, for example, can earn over $200,000 in a one-week sell-out engagement at the Garden State Festival in New Jersey. Another summer theater which draws capacity crowds at top prices is the Blossom Music Festival in Cleveland.

Some performers scheduled to pick up $200,000-plus bonus checks at Garden State this year: Burt Bacharach, Tom Jones, Engelbert Humperdinck, The Fifth Dimension.

YOUR CHILD MAY HAVE PIN-WORMS 1 OUT OF 3 DOES

Fidgeting, nose-picking, a tormenting rectal itch are often telltale signs of Pin-Worms...ugly parasites that medical experts say infest 1 out of every 3 persons examined. Entire families may be victims and not know it.

To get rid of Pin-Worms, they must be killed in the large intestine where they live and multiply. That's exactly what Jayne's P-W tablets do...and here's how they do it:

First—a scientific coating carries the tablets into the bowels before they dissolve. Then — Jayne's modern, medically-approved ingredient goes right to work—kills Pin-Worms quickly, easily. Ask your pharmacist.

Don't take chances with dangerous, highly contagious Pin-Worms which infect entire families. Get genuine Jayne's P-W Vermifuge...small, easy-to-take tablets...special sizes for children and adults.

PREMIUM SAVINGS BONDS

For years Great Britain has conducted a national lottery of sorts, known as the Treasury's Premium Bond System. Government bonds which bear no interest but pay off in tax-free cash awards ranging from $60 to $150,000 are sold to the public.

The bonds cost one pound ($2.40) each. No person may own more than 2000 bonds. The lucky bond serial numbers are drawn weekly by a computer popularly nicknamed "Ernie."

If the U.S. wants to sell more savings bonds, perhaps it should play around with the idea of the Premium Bond System or some variation thereof.

NURSES SUCCEED

There may be a shortage of nurses on mainland U.S.A., but according to a report of the Legislative Reference Bureau, "No serious shortage of nurses exists in Hawaii."

Apparently a large portion of Hawaii's nursing vacancies are filled by "transient nurses" who migrate from Canada and other cold climes, especially in the winter months. Then, succumbing to the island blandishments, they stay on.

ZONES OF ASYLUM

In 1864 and again in 1907 when the Geneva Convention and its rules of war were adopted by many nations throughout the world, scant attention was paid to the role of civilians. Back then wars were fought by professional soldiers and sailors, and the rules applied to them.

Mindful of what happened to civilians in World War II and how warfare had progressively become almost total, another Geneva Convention was called in 1949 to formulate some rules for the protection of civilians in time of war.

Now, Marcel Naville, president of the International Red Cross, wants amendments dealing with civilians involved in guerrilla wars, civil wars, brushfire wars, and Vietnam-type wars, added to the convention rules.

Naville suggests that as soon as hostilities break out, the warring nations or parties agree upon special bomb-free zones of asylum for noncombatants.

These zones, he says, would serve as sanctuaries for civilians, the sick and wounded. He also wants permission for the Red Cross to aid guerrillas and to protect civilians under the occupation of foreign troops.

HOT TILES

Italy's police are trying to track down the latest in pornography--tile floors which show nude girls in erotic positions.

Thousands of these tiles have already been exported to West Germany, which comprises the single largest market for European pornography.

The individual tiles show little. Fit them all together, however, as one would a jigsaw puzzle--and wow! The owner can end up with the most sexy bathroom floor or kitchen wall in the neighborhood.

Italian authorities believe the source of the tiles to be Sassuolo, the capital of Italy's ceramics industry. More than 200 tile firms do a thriving business in this area, so that the job of finding the guilty manufacturer has not been easy.

who perspire heavily

A different formula has been found to keep underarms absolutely dry—even for thousands who perspire heavily. A formula so different it has far more anti-wetness agent than it is possible to put in any aerosol can. By anybody. After decades of common "deodorants," it took a chemical invention to make this truly effective protection possible—with the same safety to clothing—the same skin mildness as popular "deodorants." Called Mitchum Anti-Perspirant, it is the product of a trustworthy 57-year-old laboratory and guaranteed by Good Housekeeping. By the thousands, women with problem perspiration are finding the protection they need—and never could find before. And fully effective as a deodorant, too, of course. If you perspire more than average—even heavily—get the positive protection of Mitchum Anti-Perspirant. Your choice, liquid or cream. Ninety-day supply, each $3.00. Chops in a Flavorful Sauce

by Beth Merriman

PARADE FOOD EDITOR

Shoulder lamb chops have all the flavor of more expensive chops and it properly cooked are as tender and succulent as could wish. The secret is low temperature throughout the process. Served in a sauce of exotic flavor on a bed of noodles, chops make a main dish to remember.

Savory Shoulder Lamb Chops

4 large shoulder lamb chops
2 tablespoons vegetable oil
1 large garlic clove, crushed
1/2 teaspoon powdered ginger
1 cup dry white wine
Few drops hot pepper sauce

Brown chops slowly on both sides in oil. Combine remaining ingredients, mix well, pour over chops. Simmer over very low heat minutes. Serve chops and sauce over hot buttered noodles. CROUTONS and POPPY SEEDS have been added. Makes 4 servings.

COAT OF ARMS
IDEAL FOR HOME OR OFFICE
PERFECT FOR FAMILY AND FRIENDS

In the library of the famed Sanson Institute of Heraldry, there are over 500,000 names and coats of arms. Sanson Institute has been able to locate a coat of arms for over 93% of the families who have applied for them. Regardless of the fact that the spelling of your name might have changed over the centuries, Sanson's trained research staff will be able to determine the original name and coat of arms.

Centuries ago during the Crusades, people of almost every religion, of almost every European country, and from almost every walk of life were assigned a family coat of arms. Heralds recorded these armorial bearings and it is from these records that we can confirm the coat of arms for your family name. We guarantee its authenticity. You don't have to be of noble birth for our researchers to find a coat of arms for your surname. You'll be thrilled to display your coat of arms in your home or office. Impress your friends... let Sanson Institute research your name. Perfect gift idea, too!

BORE LOCK: You can make any gun safe and tamperproof with this new device (above, left). It has a 3-tumbler combination lock that fits on end of barrel. You can install and remove it in seconds and it shows instantly that a gun is safe because no shell can be in the chamber when device is installed. Models for shotgun, rifle, revolver. $4.98. Bor-Lok, Dept. PP, 4200 California St., San Francisco, Calif. 94118.

FRY COVER: New for electric fry pans, this aluminum mesh cover (above, right) manages to trap spattering grease while allowing steam to escape freely. As a result, foods fry crisply, according to maker. The 12 1/2" square cover fits most electric fry pans, has ring-type handle, can be washed with the dishes, will not rust or corrode. $1.98 in stores. Research Products Corporation, Dept. AIR MOTOR: Designed for small-boat shallow-water operation, this new air motor (above, left) lets you get back where the fish and game are, claims maker. As long as boat is floating, the motor will move it without sheering pins, tangling weeds, or stirring up mud. You can carry the 59-lb. unit from car to boat, mount and remove it readily. It fits 10' to 16' boats, reaches speeds up to 10 mph. Details: Susquehanna Air Motors, Dept. PP, 5217 Terrace Rd., Mechanicsburg, Pa. 17055.

ALL-IN-ONE LAWN CARE: Here's a rotary mower (above, right) that has all the equipment you need to do a faster, cleaner, almost complete lawn care job. A special attachment, mounted ahead of the mower, edges in one position and with the flick of a handle switches to another position for trimming. You can adjust edger and trimmer heights. High-lift 20" blade in main mower sweeps clippings into grass bag. Complete information: Parkton, Dept. PP, 12512 S. Springfield, Alsip, Ill. 60658.

WASH AND DRY: Particularly handy if you have a space problem, a new single cabinet clothes washer-dryer combination takes half the space of separate washer and dryer units and eliminates need to transfer wet clothes. A wash-and-dry cycle requires 70 to 100 minutes depending upon the type of fabric being dried. A special setting for permanent press garments tumbles them periodically in unheated air for up to 2 hours after drying is completed to insure neat appearance. The 29" W, 47" H, 31" D appliance is available in gas and electric models. For details: Sears, Dept. 703-PP, 303 E. Ohio St., Chicago, Ill. 60611.

Carl A. Robins, lifer in a Texas prison, leads a symposium on drugs with five fellow convicts. At his right, prison official looks on.

Straight Talk About Drugs

Six Convicts Tell It Like It Is

By Carl A. Robins

AUTHOR'S NOTE: I am a convict, 35, white, middle class. Completed tenth grade "outside," now taking college courses in prison—the maximum security unit of the Texas Department of Corrections, Huntsville. Began serving time for drug-related offenses in 1951. Started with marijuana, then barbiturates, then heroin. Now serving a life sentence for possession of morphine. [Texas imposes the nation's stiffest narcotics sentences, ranging from two years to life.]

HUNTSVILLE, TEX.

In spite of widespread attention given to drug abuse, worried parents are still in the dark on what they can do. In fact, the very abundance of drug information is confusing. You can read one eminent psychologist: "Marijuana does not lead to addictive drugs nor does evidence prove that it is a risk to health or emotional stability." However, another says, "Heroin addiction is definitely related to prior use of marijuana and heavy use of marijuana produces the same emotional and mental reactions as LSD."

Parents despair

It's easy to see why so many parents are in despair over what to tell children. How can parents try to guard against drug abuse if they don't know exactly what it is?

In hopes of clarification, I've put together a symposium of five fellow prisoners. None holds any high degree in psychology or any other field but all know the drug scene well and are serving time for drug violations.

Q. Mike, why the increasing use among young people?

(Mike is 34, white, high school graduate. Started on marijuana at 18, then heroin. Serving 25 years for possession of heroin.)

MIKE: Mainly, drugs have become a way of sidestepping ever-mounting social pressures. Young people feel strongly about racism, poverty and war but can't do much about it. They feel that the U.S. is far more concerned with technology than brotherhood. Since youth wants change overnight, they become restless, anxious, often bitter. They flee what they call our "sick" society for the haven of pot (marijuana), pills, and horse (heroin).

Q. Are social pressures greater today?

MIKE: I think far greater than when I went on drugs in the 1950's. But even back then I was insecure—frustrations on sex, home life, school and competition among friends damn sure pushed me into drugs. True, this was a copout but at least when I was high I wasn't miserable. So I sympathize with young people who are living in a society out of tune with their emotions.

College course

Q. Frank, do you agree?

(Frank, 38, black, high school dropout, reared in New York's Harlem, took to heroin at 15. Serving 20 years for possession of heroin and is only six credit hours away from a college degree in prison.)

FRANK: Yes, but I'd add more. Many young cats get stoned because it's a way of belonging. Junk is a cultural thing, like you spot a user by his dress, hair, walk, his rap (talk). Pot smoking borders on ritual. Kids have special literature, language, music and heroes. Getting loaded is not only an escape, it's being accepted by their swinging peers.

Q. Why do the kids prefer pot?

FRANK: It's cheap and plentiful. You can stay loaded all day for only three or four bucks. The same high on heroin—$30 to $100, and you have to beat the streets day and night hustling a fix, dodging the cops and stealing. And pot isn't addictive but its high generates a great feeling. Music sounds better, food tastes better and you aren't uptight around people.

Q. Pete, can pot be dangerous?

(Pete, 31, Mexican-American, sixth-grade dropout, attends prison high school. Serving 15 years for growing marijuana.)

From pot to needle

PETE: Everybody has a different opinion. The best grade of it is grown in the Southwest and if you smoke a lot of that you can really blow your mind. I've panicked many times on it and my friend jumped out of a car at 70 miles an hour. He thought the cops were on his tail. There's about 3000 heroin junkies in this prison, and 95 percent of 'em will tell you they started on grass (marijuana). And contrary to general belief, it's not a cold-hearted pusher who starts a kid on heroin, it's an addict, a "friend" who wants to test your mettle, get you into his thing. So like one day you're playing it cool smoking a little grass and then—wham! you've got a needle hung in your arm.

Q. Bob, what do you think about the hallucinogens—LSD, mescaline, peyote?

(Bob, 26, white, middle class, began using LSD in 1965 while at the University of Houston. Serving 15 years for possession of heroin.)

BOB: They're bad news. My chick committed suicide on a mix of speed and LSD. She locked herself in the bathroom and cut herself all over with a razor blade. And I couldn't help, I was out of my skull, too. LSD has put me in three nuthouses and I almost stayed in the last one.

No skin

Q. What happens on LSD?

BOB: Man, it's too much. The kick comes on slow and weird. A gang of sound and color and fantastic scenes in your head. I could see myself sitting in front of me. I didn't have any skin. I was raw and bloody all over. I drove my car into a telephone pole. Only to me it was no pole, it was a giant scorpion and I had to kill it before it hurt somebody. You can imagine how this sounded to the cops!

But the amphetamines are just as terrible as acid. Trash like Benzedrine, Dexedrine, Methedrine—large doses will cause bad freak-outs.

Q. Stan, how can parents keep children drug-free?

Pupils at a Connecticut junior high school listened raptly when a panel of three ex-addicts warned about drug use. Kids feel that former users can tell the true story.

(Stan is 39, white, high school graduate. Began using drugs in the Army. Serving a life sentence for possession of heroin.)

STAN: Many parents push their kids too hard into competition, away from the natural pleasure of being young. If the parent could only try to see his kid as a complex human with a need for love, attention and understanding—above all else. If the parent would grant his kid the right to express himself with rock music, long hair and crazy clothes. Love his child as his child instead of making him feel he'll be a nobody unless he becomes President of the U.S. or General Motors.

Drug use is linked with environmental pressures and these begin in the home, the family. Parents should use their dominance to mold a man instead of a scared cripple who sees life as a rat race for survival.

Q. If a kid is busted for drug use, how should a parent react?

STAN: Typically, he blows his top. He's often more embarrassed than alarmed because his social image is damaged. Too often he says to the kid, "How could you do this to me?" This makes the kid all the more confused, humiliated and alienated from his parents and himself. What the parent should concentrate on is more love for the kid and convince him that the real victim of drugs is himself.

Q. Mike, can parents teach by setting an example?

MIKE: Since we're talking about the life of a boy or a girl, the parents must be willing to gain the child's respect with sacrifice—give up liquor, for example. And certain pills. A kid thinks it's hypocritical to call a tranquilizer "good," marijuana "bad."

How to help

Q. Stan, any further advice for parents?

STAN: If a kid is on drugs he needs professional help as soon as possible. The best is from former addicts. Such people can get next to a young user. A kid will listen to an ex-addict, they talk the same language, understand the hangups, the loneliness and desperation. These people can be found at drop-in centers and halfway houses in all large communities, many small ones. If such a program isn't available in your city, make it "happen." That's by far the best way to show your concern.

This country has all the knowledge and money to whip the drug epidemic. But it has to care enough about it's young people to get the ball rolling on a grand scale.

AUTHOR: So there are the views of five men who know what they're talking about when it comes to drugs. They've been through the mill and they're paying for it. I advise all parents to take these convicts' views seriously.

When Your Child Asks About Sex

most important and delicate of parenthood is and honestly helping the child to acquire a clear understanding of sex. It's an oftentimes difficult task which even the sagest of parents sometimes need help. There is help available—Parents' Answer Book: What Your Child Ought to Know—that's written specifically to help.

Parents are on the minds of children more than ever before. The traditional wraps are being torn and parents' questions are likely to be frank and blunt.

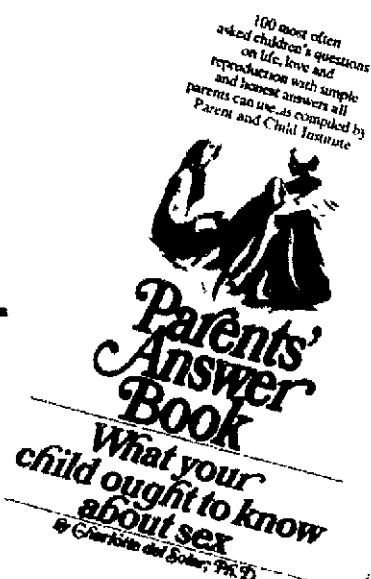

Parents' Answer Book, answers to children's questions are presented by Dr. Gloria del Solar, Ph.D., in understandable, straightforward language and where it is most appropriate. "Have a talk" with your child about sex? What lines are to be followed? The book, which PARADE readers can buy for only $1, includes a list compiled by the Parent and Child Institute of Chicago of the 100 questions most frequently asked by children about sex, love and childbirth—and the answers that go with them.

Parents' Answer Book makes clear that sex is a normal, healthy part of life—that it's natural for children to experience both curiosity and anxiety about it. At the bargain price of $1 the book will be a welcome addition to any household with children.

The natural approach to skin beauty

It has long been recognized that lemons are nature's own beauty tonic for skin. Now Lemon Jelvyn Skin Freshener and Lemon Jelvyn Cleansing Milk are here to help enhance the natural glow of fresh skin beauty.

Begin and end your day with a beautifying lemon milk facial. Stroke Lemon Jelvyn Cleansing Milk over your face and neck, working it in with light circlings of the fingertips. This blend of lemon and milky penetrants deep-cleanses and unclogs your pores.

Lemon Jelvyn Cleansing Milk lifts and removes makeup particles, dust and dirt, and all the pollutants that can so easily stifle your skin. When the milk is wiped or rinsed away, you will see the petal-soft splendor of your thoroughly cleansed complexion.

Complete every cleansing session by splashing Lemon Jelvyn Skin Freshener generously over your complexion. Your skin will be refreshed. Your relaxed and totally cleansed pores will immediately return to their normal size.

By utilizing this lemon action freshener, your skin will reap the loveliest of beauty benefits. Added to the stimulation you will feel, will be a well conditioned appearance of clarity, sparkle and fine-grained texture.

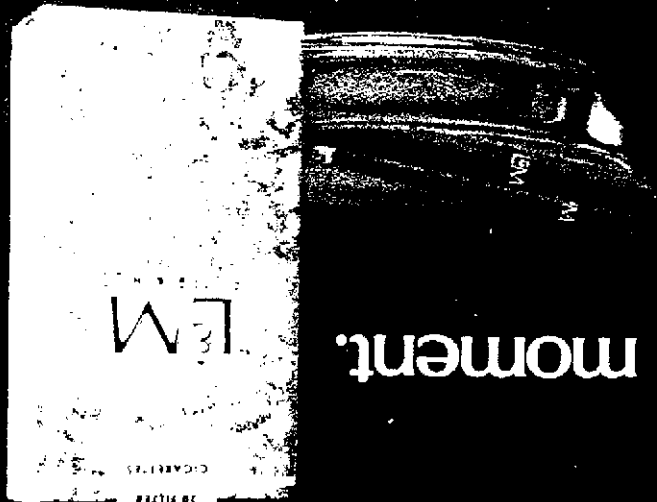

Lemon Jelvyn Cleansing Milk and Lemon Jelvyn Skin Freshener—unexcelled for cleansing and toning. Ask for both at your favorite drug or department store today.

My FAVORITE JOKES by ALAN SUES

OF Alan Sues, Big Al, par excellence on Rowan's Laugh-In, has been able to after ever since he can re- I'd always been kind of thought I could overcome ally be good in dramatic, t he didn't know was how overcome the rare gift of ifornia-born and-bred, he Pasadena Playhouse determined to be a dramatic actor. And, because he had his own view of how things should be done he got thrown out three times. No more dramatics. He came to New York to his first job as a standup comedian, and went on to play the nightclub circuit, including the Hungry i, the Purple Onion, the Blue Angel, and the Coconut Grove

Then came television. He did pilot shows, one after the other. "King of the unused pilots," he called himself. But there were game shows and talk shows as well. Eventually there was, and is, Laugh-In. Big Al has also starred in a syndicated radio series called Hickey High, and written a book entitled Big Al Tells It Like It Really Isn't.

Herewith some of his favorite jokes:

Garbage man greeting co-workers as they begin the day's run: "Good morning, fellow ecologists!"

A man put a card in one of those date-matching machines that said, "I am young, handsome and healthy, and I'm looking for someone to love." Out came the card from the machine, "Don't just stand there, kiss me."

Doctor to overweight patient: "You may eat anything you like. Here's a list of what you're going to like."

Man leaving on a hunting trip to his wife: "We'll take turns with the meals. Chester will mix the dinners, Martin will shake the lunches and I'll open the six-packs for breakfast."

A man phoned the doctor: "My wife has dislocated her jaw. If you happen to pass by in a week or so, just drop in. No hurry."

A golf match between inmates of a penitentiary and some touring professionals was billed as the "Pros and Cons Invitational."

You're nobody till somebody loves you, and the next thing you know, you're a den mother.

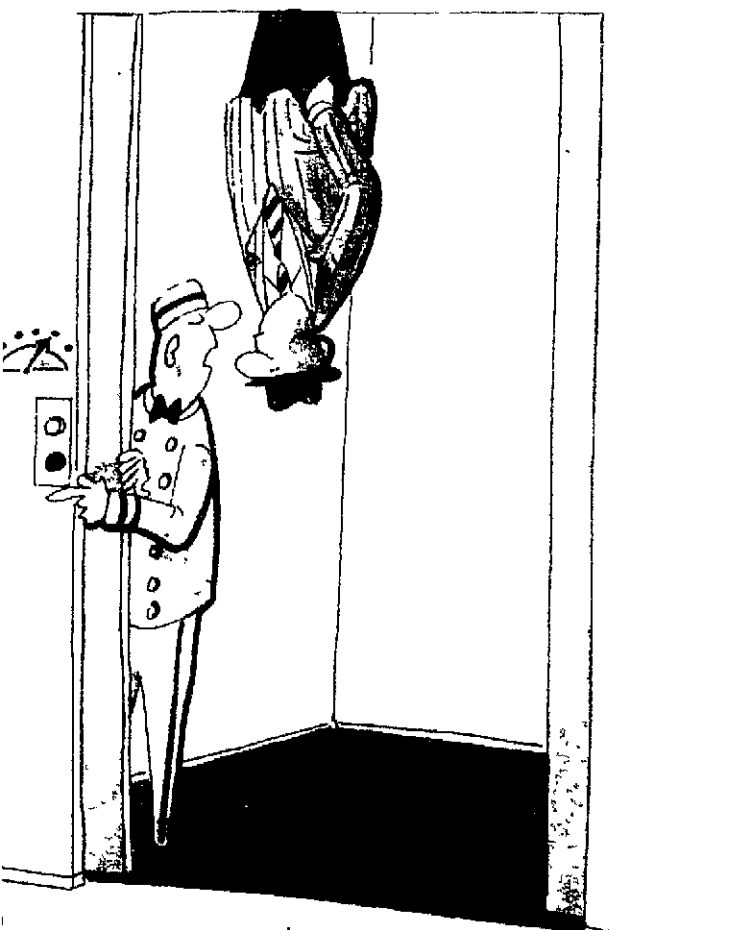

Asked how his children were, my father replied: "I don't really know. I am in touch with them only enough to keep me upset."

Woman explaining auto accident: "It's his fault, officer, I was reading his bumper sticker."

OUR NEW AGE

ATHELSTAN SPILHAUS

CHARLES A. WHITTEN, OF THE NATIONAL OCEAN SURVEY, PREDICTED THAT 1971 WOULD BE A PERIOD OF PEAK EARTHQUAKE ACTIVITY BY STUDYING SMALL WOBBLES OF THE NORTH POLE.

OTHERS SUGGEST THAT WHEN EARTH, MOON AND SUN ARE IN LINE (AS IN AN ECLIPSE) THE PROBABILITY IS GREATER

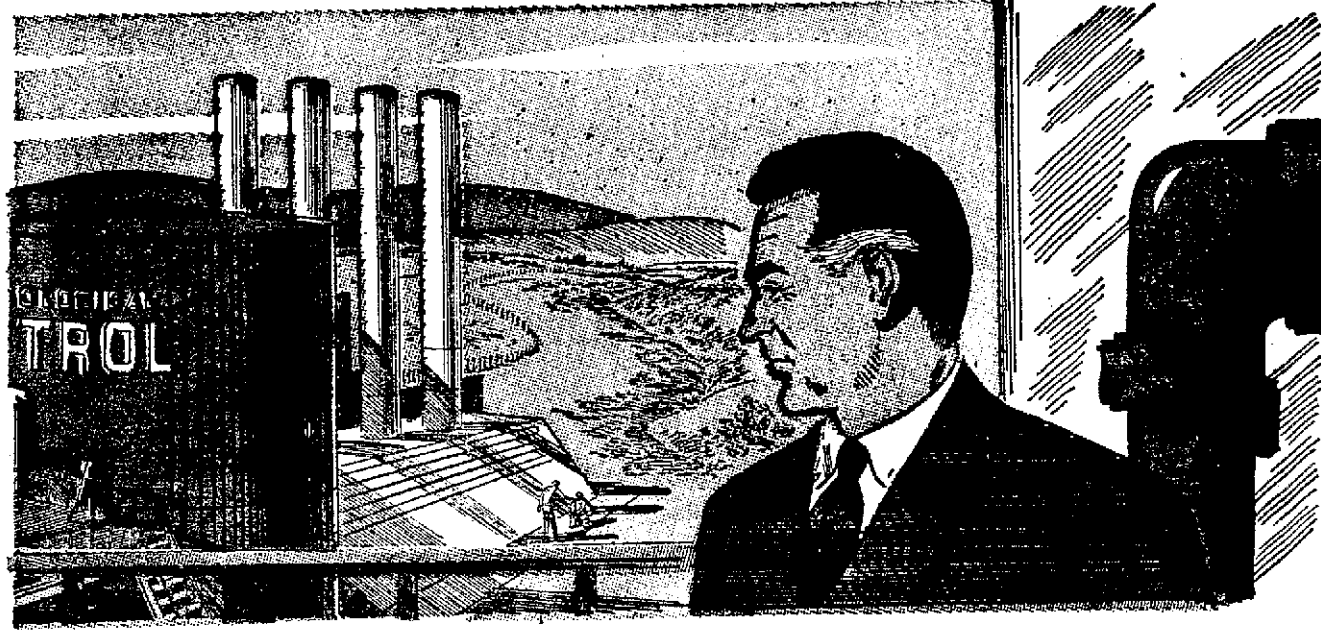

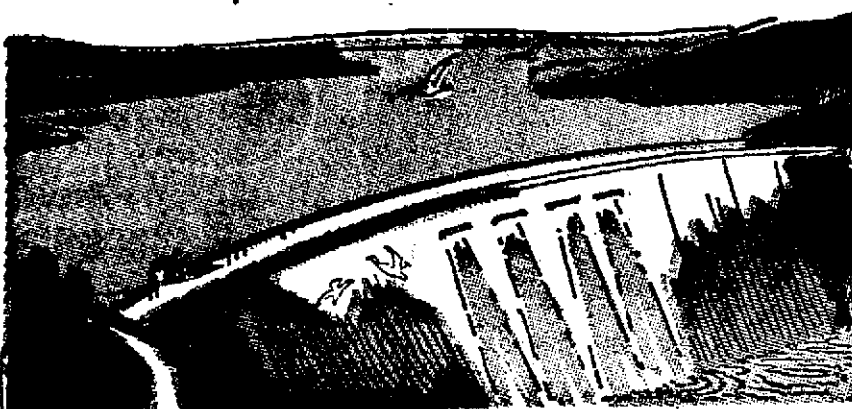

EARTHQUAKES HAVE TAKEN A TERRIBLE TOLL OF LIVES. 50,000 PEOPLE WERE KILLED IN PERU IN 1970, ABOUT THE SAME NUMBER IN LISBON IN 1755. SICILY, IN 1908, HAD 75,000 DEATHS AND JAPAN IN 1923, 100,000. THE FAMOUS SAN FRANCISCO QUAKE IN 1906 (100 TIMES MORE SEVERE THAN L.A., 1971) TOOK ONLY 390 LIVES.

THOUGH PROGRESS TOWARD PREDICTION CONTINUES, EARTH SCIENTISTS NOW FEEL THAT EFFORTS SHOULD BE MADE TO CONTROL EARTHQUAKES.

TREMORS OCCUR AS HUGE DAMS (THE HOOVER DAM IN ARIZONA; THE KARIBA DAM IN RHODESIA) ARE FILLED. IN INDIA, FILLING A DAM PRECEDED THE KOYNA EARTHQUAKE OF 1967, WHICH TOOK 200 LIVES.

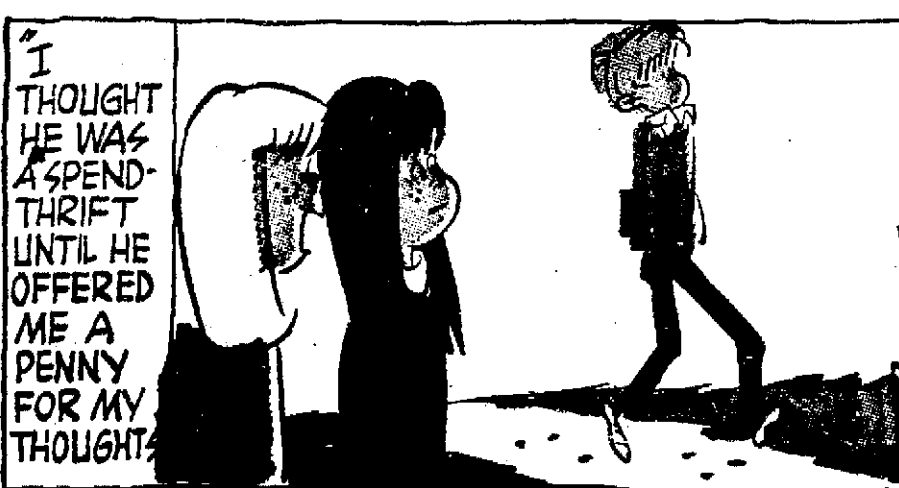

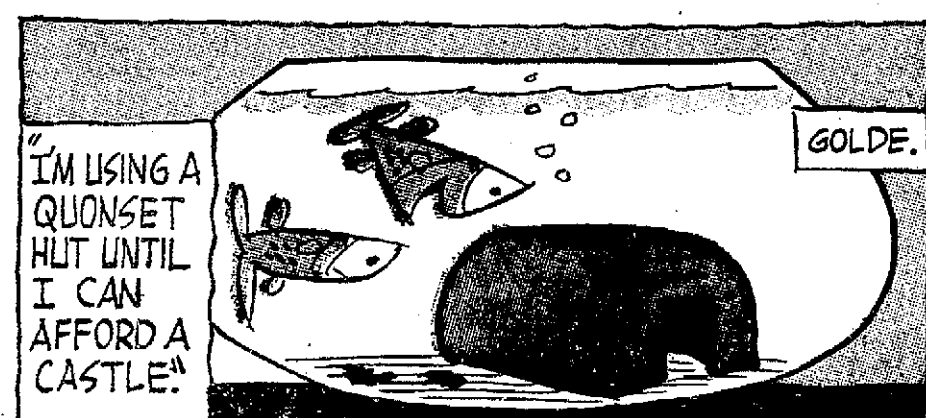

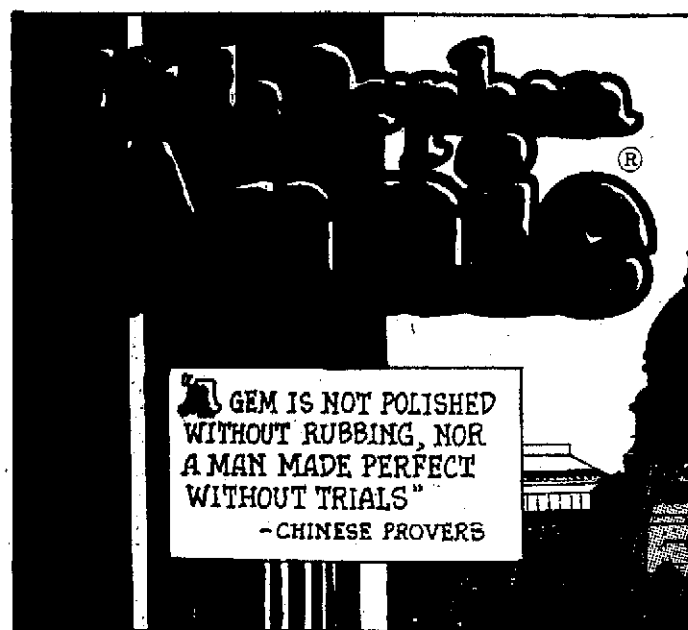

SOME SCIENTISTS NOW BELIEVE THAT JUDICIOUS INJECTION OF WATER INTO SELECTED PARTS OF EARTHQUAKE-PRONE REGIONS, MIGHT RELEASE STRAINS IN A NUMBER OF SMALL TREMORS AND THUS AVOID A MAJOR CATASTROPHE!

CHILDREN'S TALES

the Funny Little Squirrel

PART III
THE BUTTERFLIES MADE A PLAN TO HELP ORVILLE FLY. THEY ALL GRABBED HIM WITH THEIR LITTLE HANDS... AND OFF THEY WENT.

BUT ORVILLE COULDN'T ALWAYS HAVE BUTTERFLIES FLYING HIM AROUND. SO HE THANKED THEM BUT SAID HE'D HAVE TO THINK OF A BETTER WAY.

THEN, ORVILLE MET AN INDUSTRIOUS BEAVER. HE GOT AN IDEA. "BEAVER, CAN YOU HELP ME MAKE SOMETHING WITH YOUR FINE TWIGS?" THE BEAVER WAS VERY HELPFUL AND IN A LITTLE WHILE...

BEAVER WAS PUSHING ORVILLE OFF WITH A FINE SET OF NEW WINGS...

BUT, OH ME, BEFORE TOO LONG, ORVILLE WAS EARTH-BOUND AGAIN.

SO, HE CLIMBED BACK TO HIS NEST AND SAID TO HANK AND HARVEY: "OKAY, I GIVE UP. I'M NEVER GOING TO BE ABLE TO FLY."

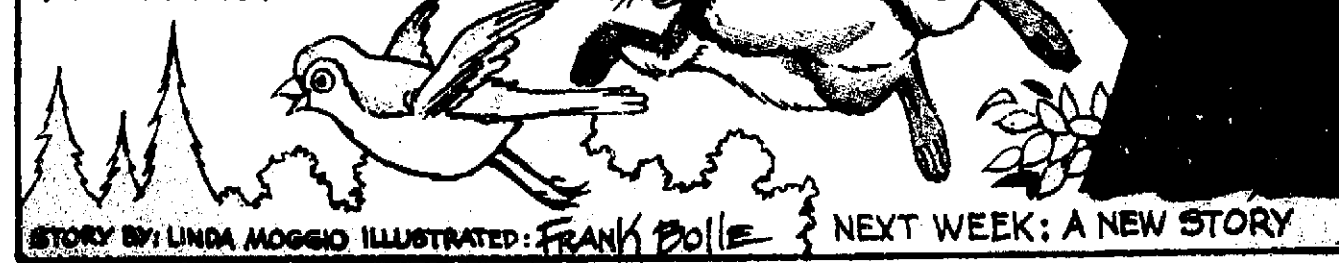

HE PLUNKED HIMSELF DOWN A LITTLE TOO HARD INTO HIS NEST, THOUGH, AND IT FLIPPED! AND SO DID ORVILLE.

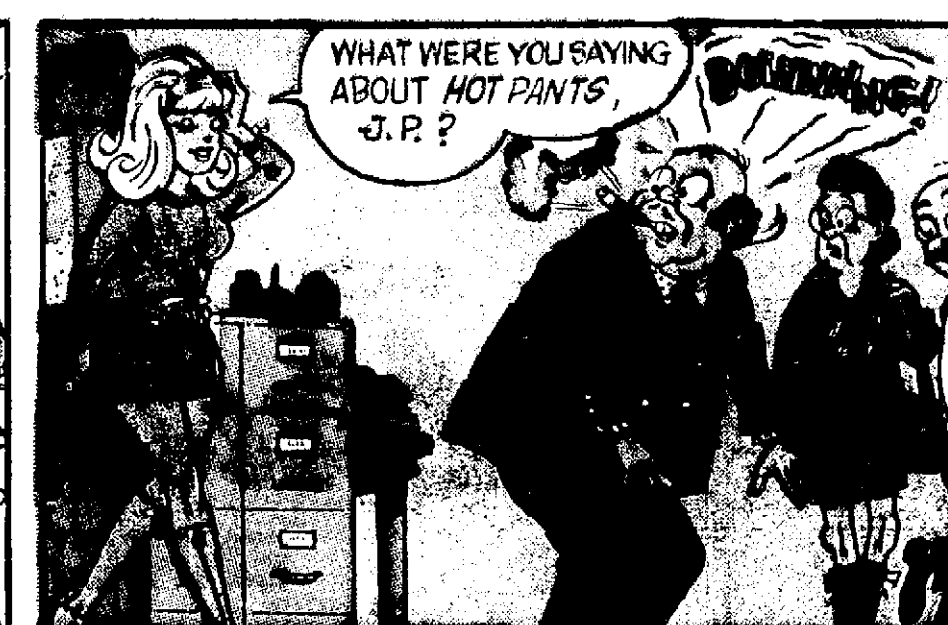

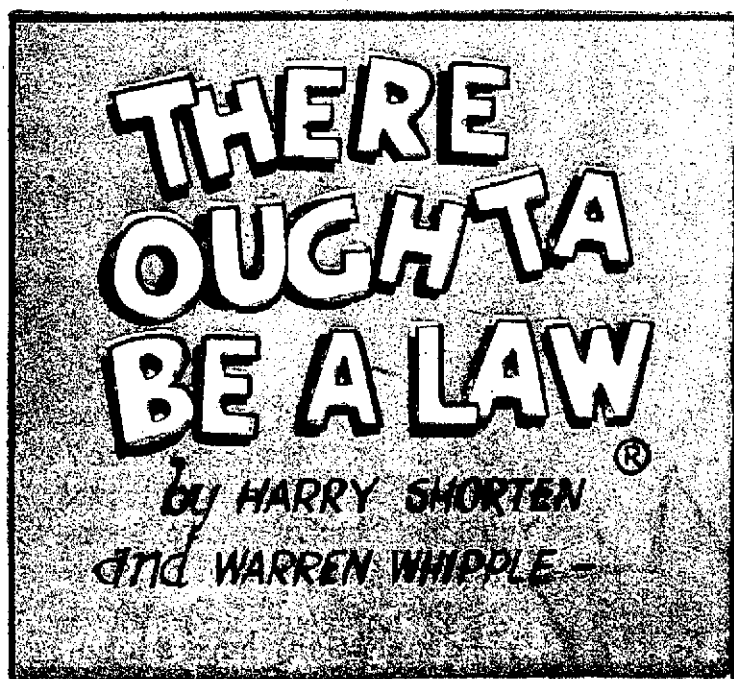

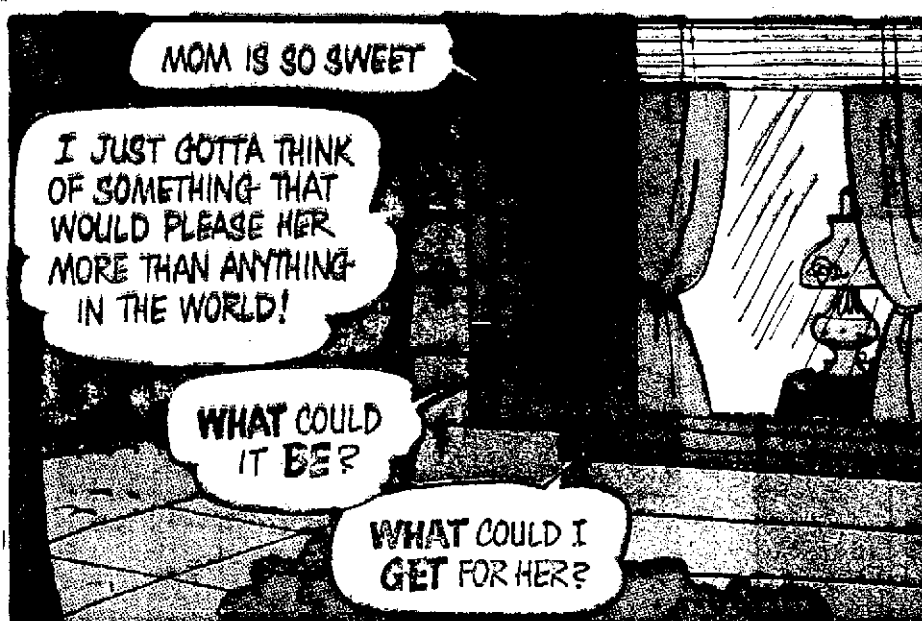

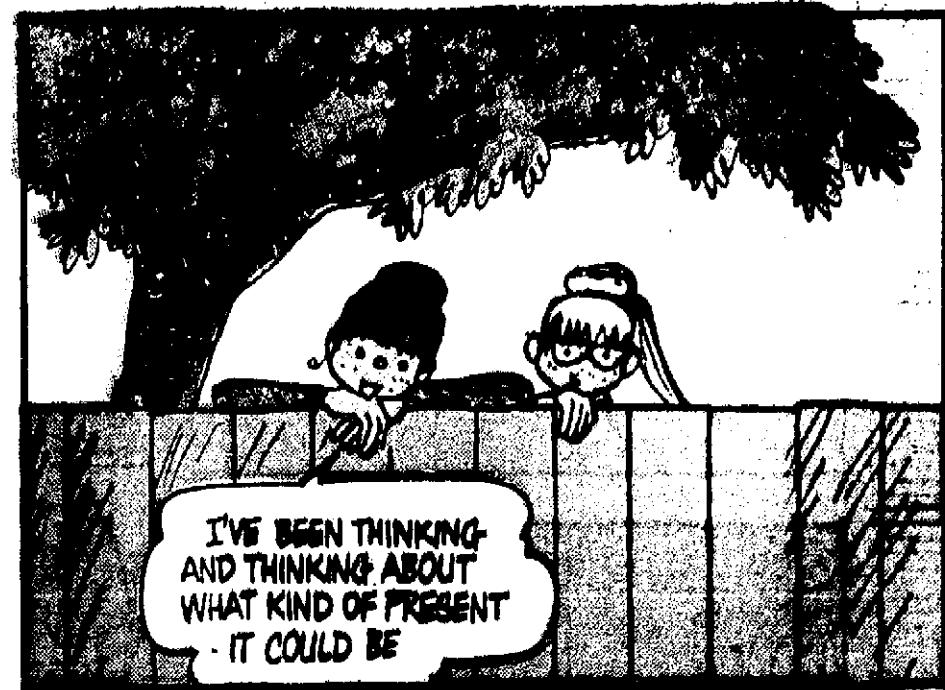

BUT TO EVERYONE'S SURPRISE, ORVILLE DIDN'T FALL. HE FLOATED! HE WAS FLYING! "LOOK AT YOUR ARMS AND LEGS, ORVILLE," CRIED HANK, "YOU MUST BE A FLYING SQUIRREL!"

ORVILLE WAS A FLYING SQUIRREL. HE COULDN'T FLY UP, BUT HE COULD GLIDE DOWN FROM ANY HIGH PLACE. AND FROM THEN ON HE COULD ALWAYS BE SEEN HAPPILY FLYING FROM TREE TO TREE WITH HIS TWO BROTHER BIRDS, HANK AND HARVEY.

What can you do? Collect these new Peanuts cartoons. You'll find that the Prince of Sandwiches, Charlie Brown, Lucy, Linus, Sally, and the whole Peanuts Gang have a lot of good ideas on how you can make our country a neater place to live. There are a total of twelve different cartoons, so be sure to get them all. Just look for the special loaves of fresh, hale and hearty Butternut White Bread. And join the fight to "Keep the Kingdom Clean."
